100 HURT IN BIG STRIKE RIOT

FOSS PREDICTS WHOLESALE VICTORY

"Entering upon the final week of the campaign, I am more convinced than ever that the Republican organization is to be routed from Beacon Hill. It is the people's fight against privilege, and the people are going to win. I was never more confident of victory than I am to-day.—Eugene N. Foss starting on Western tour.

ROBBERS TERRORIZE BROOKLINE

Brookline women in the exclusive Corey Hill section and residents of Brighton are in a fever of excitement to-day because of the daring holding up of four women who were robbed of their purses and handbags within the past few days.

Four inspectors have been sent to the scene from Boston police headquarters and they have begun work in connection with the Brookline and Brighton forces to round up the crooks who have been terrorizing that section of Greater Boston.

Description of Robber.

The sleuths are on the lookout for a man described by three of the women as follows:

Age—About twenty years.
Height—About 5 feet 10 inches.
Weight—About 150 pounds.

Practically every woman in the terrorized sections declared to-day against going out alone after dark. Some went so far as to assert would stay indoors until the police have succeeded in rounding up the thieves responsible for the boldest holdups the section has known in a long time.

Since Thursday night the robberies have been of nightly occurrence. The continued activity of the robbers to-day resulted in extra precautions being taken by the police. Captain James Sullivan of Division 14 in Brighton has assigned extra men to patrol the Corey Hill section, on the Brighton side, while the Brookline police are doing their part in the other part of the district across the corporation limits.

List of Victims.

The four victims who were attacked and robbed were Miss Mary McDougall, a maid employed at No. 6 Cheswick road, on Thursday night; Miss Mary Murphy, employed as telephone operator in the Brighton Homeopathic Hospital, robbed on Friday night; Mrs. Charles H. Atwood, of No. 127 Franklin street, Allston, robbed on Saturday night, and Miss Katherine E. Coakley, who was held up while with her mother early last evening, near her home at No. 96 Corey road, Brookline.

Miss McDougall told the following story to-day of the attack on her Thursday night:

"I came home from downtown on a Beacon street car and got off at Commonwealth and Chestnut Hill avenue. I had started up Englewood avenue when two men came up behind me. I still hear the words of where one of them cried and put my throat with his fingers. The other grabbed my wrist, and took my purse containing $1.20 in change. Then both ran off toward Commonwealth avenue.

Robbed Waiting for Car.

"I had received permission to take a car ride to get some fresh air after a long day's work at the hospital, "said Miss Murphy, to-day. "I missed a car and was waiting for the next light at Commonwealth and Summit avenues. A man came up and stood near me. He was about twenty years old, 5 feet, 10, and weighed 150 pounds. His face was smooth and tough looking, and he had a pronounced chin. His coat was black with gray trousers, and he wore a soft brown hat turned up in front.

"A number of autos passed. Then after a while the car appeared. The man walked into the street, peered up and down. Then he grabbed my left hand. I screamed. He took my purse and ran up Commonwealth avenue.

Victims Suffer from Shock.

Mrs. Atwood said she was near Hoagland street on Franklin street, Allston, Saturday night about 8 o'clock. She had a large handbag containing a gold bracelet and $1.20 in change. She said a man sneaked up, grabbed the bag and made off. She described her assailant as being 5 feet 10 inches, weighing about 150 pounds, with dark suit and hat.

Miss Coakley said: "I was with my mother in front of No. 96 Corey road, when a man sneaked up and wrenched my wrist. Then he took my bag and ran. My mother's were on the handbag, which contained a safety deposit vault key, a good watch, a penny and 30 bill broker. The man was about 5 feet 10 inches in height, weighed 150 pounds, wore an old derby hat, and black suit. He was smooth shaven."

The four victims are all suffering from the shock incident to being held up. Miss Coakley was unable to go to work to-day because of her nervous condition.

ABANDONED VESSEL IN PATH OF LINERS

ST. JOHN, N. B., Oct. 31.—Drifting about the Bay of Fundy, in the path of steamers and sailing craft, the little schooner Maggie is a derelict. Her crew of three escaped when she struck at the entrance to Quaco harbor. They had thought the vessel would break up but recovered that instead the boat had been. ...d from its position on the bar and was ...ting across the Bay towards the South coast. Warnings have been ... out, but it is feared the Maggie may ... the path of some steamer or schooner ... disastrous results.

JOHN B. MOISANT, WHO WINS STATUE OF LIBERTY PRIZE

MOISANT IS MADE WINNER BY AERO CLUB

BELMONT PARK, N. Y., Oct. 31.—John B. Moisant, the American aviator, was officially hailed to-day as winner of the great flight yesterday to the statue of Liberty in New York harbor and return, for the $10,000 prize offered by Thomas F. Ryan.

In one of the most thrilling races in the history of aviation, Moisant beat his rivals, Count Jacques de Lesseps, the Frenchman and Claude Grahame-White, the English winner of the big international event on Saturday, easily distancing his French competitor, but defeating the winner of the international cup event by only forty-three seconds.

The margin, however narrow, was sufficient, although it was thought until an early hour to-day that the American had not clinched his victory, as it was understood the race was still open for competition to-day. The Aero Club of America, however, cautioned Moisant's protest against further competition for the liberty prize, ruling that the meet as officially scheduled closed with yesterday's events, to-day being an extra or added day. Thus Moisant wins the big race and gets the $10,000 prize.

Moisant won in the elapsed time of 54:38.84, Grahame-White was second in 55:21.30, and de Lesseps was third in 61:50.25.

OKLAHOMA LOSES IN SUPREME COURT

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—The motion of the State of Oklahoma for a writ of certiorari in the two-cent rate injunction case in that State, in which seven railroads are the defendants, was denied by the United States Supreme Court to-day. The point at issue was the temporary injunction secured by the railroads preventing the State from enforcing the two-cent railroad rate. Today's action sustained the injunction.

MAN'S CASE ARGUED BY WOMAN LAWYER

The first instance of a woman lawyer appearing in the Suffolk Probate Court in behalf of a man being used for support occurred to-day when Miss Lucy Sandberg, a pretty young woman of thirty-three, championed the cause of Fred Olson. Her client was being sued by his wife, Lena, for a weekly sum. They have been separated three years. Judge Grant has suggested that they get together keeping again and this agreement was reached.

YOUNG GUGGENHEIM IS SOON TO MARRY

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—Frank Guggenheim, son of Daniel Guggenheim, the multi-millionaire mine owner and developer of Alaska, secured a marriage license to-day after he and his parents had stood for nearly an hour in the marriage license room. Young Mr. Guggenheim is twenty-two years old. He will be married to Miss Helen Rosenberg on November 3.

MORE CENSUS FIGURES.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—The following population returns were announced to-day by the census bureau: Pennsylvania, Wilkesbarre township, 5,703, last 3,983.

Mississippi—Columbia City, 2,027; census 507; Gulport city, 6,386; last 4,063; 1,469.

Nebraska—Palmer 372.

Indiana—Gary, 6,976.

BIG GAINS CONCEDED TO FOSS

The final week of the most exciting State campaign in Massachusetts began today with the candidates on each side of their supporting scurrying through the State for conferences with district leaders and rallies.

Eugene N. Foss, Democratic candidate for Governor; Thomas F. Cassidy, candidate for Lieutenant-Governor; James H. Valley, and a party of associate orators from Greater Boston left early to-day to continue the campaign begun by them last week in Western Massachusetts.

The Republican campaign managers sent a group of their very best speakers down to Cape Cod to-day for a forty hour tour of that section. Reports from the Cape are discouraging for the G. O. P. leaders. The Republican plan to hold thirty rallies nightly in various parts of the State is right, to-morrow night, and Wednesday night, with a half dozen open-air rallies each day.

Candidate Foss and Cassidy held a conference with Hampden county leaders at 3 p. m. to-day in Springfield.

One hundred leaders from the cities and towns in the Connecticut River Valley were expected to attend the meeting. To-night the candidates speak in Springfield, Holyoke, Westfield and Chicopee. Besides Foss and Cassidy, the speakers will be James H. Valey, Charles S. Hamlin, William G. McKechnie, Democratic candidate for Congress in the Second District; Christopher T. Callahan of Holyoke and local candidates for the Senate and House.

Auto Tour to Worcester.

To-morrow the party will be joined by rallies at Newton, Watertown, Somerville and Chelsea by James H. Valey and Mayor Fitzgerald. There will also be an automobile tour of Worcester county.

The Republican campaign will centre in Brockton to-night at a rally in Campello Hall, when the principal speakers will be Governor Draper, Congressman Samuel W. Lawrence, Speaker Joseph Walker and Judge Robert O. Harris.

Ex-Governor Guild will be in Malden and Senator Lodge and Lieutenant-Governor Frothingham in Melrose. The list of rallies on the Republican end is the largest in the history of any State campaign. It is estimated that there will be nearly 400 speakers on the stump in the State.

To-morrow night Senator Lodge will be in Clinton and Governor Draper will speak in Lawrence.

The campaign being conducted by Daniel J. Daley of Brookline for Congress in the Twelfth District is attracting considerable attention. Daley is opposing Congressman John W. Weeks in one of the strongest Republican district in the State. On the ticket with Daley are Edward Dinneen and M. Wallner are rendering great service in his campaign.

Congressional Rallies.

In Boston the centre of interest will be in the three Congressional fights in the Ninth, Tenth and Eleventh Districts. In the Ninth District, Councillor William F. Murray, the regular Democratic nominee, and Congressman John A. Keliher, independent, will be on the stump every night of the fight in this district is very bitter. Mayor Fitzgerald and Martin M. Lomasney are both working hard for Murray. A good word has been sent out from City Hall that Keliher must be defeated at any cost. Keliher is making the Fitzgerald-Lomasney combination his issue.

General William Oakes, the Republican candidate, believes that he has an opportunity to slip in a winner because of the bitter wrangle on the Democratic side.

In the Tenth District, both Councilman James M. Curley, the Democratic candidate, and J. Mitchell Galvin, the Republican candidate, are planning rallies which will cover every section of the district.

The Galvin fight will centre in South Boston. Galvin has stated that, if elected, he will vote for the revision of all tariff schedules affecting the cost of the necessaries of life. Curley is making the fight on the "pork" issue and is charging Lodge with aiding the Galvin candidacy.

In the Eleventh District, W. Dudley Foulkes, the Republican candidate for Congress, is fighting hard for the election of Congressman Andrew J. Peters, a vigorous battle there are indications in this district that Foulkes, one of the Democratic leaders, is going to support Cotton.

500 KILLED IN URUGUAY FIGHT

BUENOS AYRES, Argentine, Oct. 31.—A report received here to-day from Montevideo, Uruguay, that a sanguinary battle had been fought between the revolutionary army and the Government forces, in which over five hundred had fallen. This information was conveyed in a private dispatch and has not been confirmed by an official report from the capital of Uruguay, which says that the losses are being concealed.

BANK CLERK HELD ON A CHARGE OF FRAUD

Harold B. Faxon, formerly paying teller in the People's National Bank of Roxbury, was to-day held in $15,000 by Judge Dodge, in the United States District Court, upon an indictment charging him with the embezzlement of $7,300 from the bank in 1903. Faxon was recently arrested in Goldfield, Nevada, and brought here by United States immarshals. Since he left Boston, he married a daughter of Donald Ferguson, who recently is alleged to have sold a mine for $200,000.

18 HURT IN HOTEL.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 31.—Eighteen people were hurt when an oil tank in the cellar of the Clyde Hotel exploded during early to-day. Many of those injured were tenants, the others were spectators in the street who were struck by flying debris.

CYCLISTS OFF IN BIG CONTEST

Twelve teams started on the long grind this afternoon at the Boston Arena, in one of the greatest six-day cycle races that was ever held in the country.

At the end of the first hour of racing the twelve teams were well bunched, the rival leaders setting a hot pace.

The big track was well filled when Leo Peck fired the starting gun. Six riders are the best set of men that ever came together for such an event, and the affair promises to be as exciting as any ever held.

The starters were Frank Kramer of East Orange, N. J.; Iver Lawson of Salt Lake City, N. M. Anderson of Denmark, Phil Wright of Salt Lake City, Fred West of San Francisco, Paddy Hehir of Australia, George Wiley of Syracuse, John Bedell of Lynnbrook, Walter Demarest of Mexico, Lloyd Thomas of San Francisco, Chris Schiller of Los Angeles and Joe Fogler of Brooklyn.

Fogler and James Collins constitute the Boston American team, and from the good showing made last Saturday night by both of them great things are expected of them this week.

The complete teams are as follows:

Frank Kramer, East Orange, N. J., and James F. Moran, Chelsea.

Iver Lawson, Salt Lake City and Gordon Walker, Australia.

N. M. Anderson, Denmark and Fred Kerlo, Newark, N. J.

Joe Fogler, Brooklyn and Elmer Collins, Lynn.

Phil Wright, Salt Lake City and Walter Palmer, Australia.

Fred West, San Francisco and Hy. L. Meyer, Davenport, Ia.

Paddy Hehir, Australia and Alfred Grenda, Australia.

George Wiley, Syracuse and Peter Lawrence, San Francisco.

Lloyd Thomas and Myron Bidell, Lynnbrook, L. I.

Walter Demarest, Mexico and Aaron Wilmot, Salt Lake City, Utah.

Chris Schiller, San Francisco and Paul B. McCarthy, Toronto.

Cliff Cavill and Joe Fogler, Los Angeles and Ernest Johnson, Newark, N. J.

SIX RESCUED FROM FLOOD IN CAMBRIDGE

By the breaking of a twelve-inch water main shortly after 11 a. m. to-day a score of cellars along Boylston street, Cambridge, were flooded. Six Italian laborers were rescued from death by drowning by their fellow workers.

A gang of laborers was removing a three-foot water main of the Metropolitan Water Works which impeded the construction of the new subway. While removing the big main the gang ran one of the workmen into the Cambridge twelve-inch main. The blow cracked the pipe. With a roar which could be heard for blocks the torrent of water shot above the roofs of three-story apartment houses along the street.

Cries of the frantic workmen rang above the hiss of the geyser. All were drenched. Other workmen rushing hastily to the scene pulled their fellow-laborers out of the hole and away from danger.

For half an hour the immense fountain spurted. Word had been forwarded to the Water Department and the water was shut off. Meanwhile the whole street had been flooded and every cellar swamped.

INVENTOR SHOT WHILE BRUSHING UP REVOLVER

William H. Davidson, an inventor of No. 20 Barry street, Dorchester, is in the city hospital with a bullet wound in his head, which the police declared he had died accidentally early to-day, while he was cleaning his revolver at his home.

The injured man, who is forty-four years of age, was taken to the hospital in an unconscious condition. The explanation of the injury was made to the police by Mrs. Davidson and by no person in the house besides her husband when the shooting occurred.

The police version of the shooting is that Davidson was cleaning a revolver, which is a .38 calibre, when the shooting occurred. There was a bullet in one of the chambers when he took the gun in his hands. In connection with the trigger and the cartridge was exploded.

The bullet entered Davidson's forehead just over the right eye. It passed entirely through the head. The man toppled to the floor. The alarm was given by Mrs. David-son. The police of Station H rushed their assistance to the house and the injured man was hurried to the hospital.

Mrs. Davidson, the injured man's wife, was seen by a reporter shortly after her husband had been removed to the hospital. She was just getting into an automobile to be carried to the hospital. She is a middle-aged woman. She was dressed in black.

"I will tell me," asked the reporter, "just how your husband got shot?"

"I have no time to talk to newspaper reporters," she replied. "I am in much too much trouble. I am in too much of a hurry."

Then she got into the machine. The chauffeur could not get the machine started. Mrs. Davidson went back into the house and called up the automobile company, ordering another machine.

Mrs. Davidson was weeping while she did so.

A report from Captain Doran's office went to the hospital, where they talked to Davidson and got her story of the shooting. They could get no inkling of Davidson's mental condition because that they might talk with him.

The police have a theory in their possession with which the men were shot.

It was understood by the neighbors that Davidson had been engaged for some time on an invention of a very complicated character, the exact nature of which, he guarded carefully.

THOUSANDS IN BATTLE WITH N. Y. POLICE

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—Wild rioting throughout the city followed the desperate efforts of the express companies, which have been crippled by the strike of the drivers and helpers, to deliver hundreds of dollars worth of perishable goods to-day. Seven thousand police were on strike duty, and they were kept busy in checking the frequent outbreaks. Many persons were injured, and shots were fired in sharp conflicts. According to the police estimate fully one hundred were hurt.

MAKE ATTACK ON LOADED EXPRESS WAGON.

The most serious trouble occurred at Fortieth street and Third avenue, following an attack in strike sympathizers on an American Express Company wagon filled with strikebreakers. Although there were two policemen on the front seat the mob captured most of the wagons and tried to drag the driver down. A mounted squad rushed to the scene, and by the time they arrived full one thousand persons were massed in the riot. Several shots were fired and many persons were hit by sticks and stones.

With drawn clubs the police cleared the crowd and it was only after a hard fight that they succeeded in driving them back. A number of the sympathizers took refuge in a hallway and fought the reserves when they tried to drive them out.

Routed by Police.

Shortly after and there was another serious riot in the same district. An American Express Company wagon with two police on the front seat with the driver and a number of guards inside was stopped by strike sympathizers. Stones were hurled but the wagon continued its way until checked by the arrival of a mounted squad.

As the rapporacked the strike sympathizer fled taking refuge in nearby beer quarters. The down-town district particularly along the water fronts was also the scene of much trouble during the early afternoon. There a riot on Broadway between Prince and Spring streets, which for a time threatened to assume serious proportions.

A United States Express Company wagon with a driver and two policemen on the front seat and two lookouts armed with rifles in the rear was attacked by a large crowd who were finally beaten off. Fifteen arrests were made.

A riot on Bleecker street followed an attack on the United States Express Company's wagon by a crowd of strike sympathizers. A mob drawn nightsticks mounted police charged the mob finally dispersing them. Frequent outbreaks occurred along the Front district.

Thirteen hundred more drivers and helpers joined the strike to-day, crippling the delivery of baggage throughout Manhattan and Brooklyn.

Strike to Be Extended.

The executive committee of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters and Stablekeepers has declared the walkout will be extended to all cities in the United States during the present week. The plan of battle which was carried out in every big city, in the national crusade, consists of the organization of sympathizers, who are now unorganized, into branches of the union.

"If the express companies do not concede the demands within a week there will be 150,000 men out with us before the week ends," said Hoffman.

CHOLERA SUSPECT BECOMES A BRIDE

MILFORD, Oct. 31.—Maria Brunoni under government surveillance as a cholera suspect, to-day the bride of Attilio Talmelli. The Brunoni girl, who is twenty-two years old, had just landed in this country from Italy. Directly after the ceremony the couple were proceeded to No. 4 Plain street, where they will pass their honeymoon. During this period they will be quarantined, although the authorities declare that they see no evidence of cholera on the suspect.

HALF THE WORLD AMERICANS IN 2160

BAY CITY, Mich., Oct. 31.—Speaking before the convention of the Michigan State Teachers' Association, the Rev. Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis of New York predicted that within 250 years half the human race would occupy the United States. He said he estimated the population would be 1,700,000,000, because the United States had the land to give so many people room.

20 YEARS OLD, IS MOTHER OF FOUR

LAUREL, Del., Oct. 31.—While Mrs. Ernest Morris was visiting her grandmother, Mrs. Mathews of Ellendale she had a surprise in the way of a fine eleven pound baby boy, the fourth born to her and her husband in about four years of matrimony. The mother is only a little over twenty years old, while the father is only twenty-two.

BEN GIBBY WINS A $1 VERDICT

Ben F. Gibby, barrister, won his suit against Richard H. Long, of South Framingham shoe manufacturer, for services in his behalf in the 1907 Legislature in opposition to the Ladd street Machinery Company, the jury to-day returning a verdict in his favor of $1.

Gibby brought a suit for $10,000 which the affected Long would pay him, although Long had paid him $2,000 "liability and that he did not get the second $1,000, but that he would be fully entitled to it from the city collector's office. Curley, on the witness stand, said he got $1,000.

The jury was out eight hours and brought in a sealed verdict Friday night. This verdict was opened in Judge Morton's court today.

MANAGER OF HOTEL SAYS HE IS BROKE

C. Gordon Jones, hotel manager, who gives his address as The Eliot, Roxbury, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy today, with the clerk of the United States District Court. His liabilities are $51,700, all but $1,000 of which he says are secured. The largest creditor is R. H. Townsend of the Shawmut National Bank building, who claims damages of $44,000 caused by the breaking of a hose, and also $1,000 for rent.

THIS WILL GIVE YOU A PAIN IN THE NECK

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—Acrophania is the latest disease, say doctors, to have been puzzled for several days by patients complaining of sharp pains in the neck and shoulders. Consulting with each other them, though few had ever been affected by that ailment before. All of those complaining had attended the athletic meet at Belmont Park, and the physicians have decided that the trouble was caused by the efforts made to watch the birdmen in their flights, causing severe strain on the muscles.

BURGLARS WRECK BANK.

BOLIVAR, O., Oct. 31.—Three burglars broke into the State Bank here early today. The heavy safe in which was $28,000, resisted several charges of nitroglycerine, but the interior of the bank was wrecked. A posse is hunting the bandits.

CANDIDATE WORRIED BY A NOISY SPOOK

"Every night there comes a tapping, as the digit one and the zero. I find that of someone gently rapping—rapping at my chamber door. And although my life's been varied and I've lived of years four score, I feel constrained to study all that's known of spirit lore."

This remarkable and somewhat poetical statement by Elwood Hyatlathe, eighty years old, a candidate for the Common Council, and for over a generation the leading barber of Malden, has not only aroused the police, but has brought to him endless queries from those interested in psychical research.

Hyatlathe says: "It is some message, I think, which some spirit is trying to give me. It has stopped at my door, in manner of giving to me a hint that it is a spirit.

"Each night, at 12 o'clock it raps once. I believe that it tries to summon my telligence by giving a single call at that hour because there is to be neither ner

HATTIE LE BLANC ON EVE OF DEATH TRIAL ASKS FOR NEW DRESS

By DOROTHY AMES.

How does Hattie LeBlanc amuse herself? What does she do during the hours when there is no work to take up her mind and occupy her time? These were the questions that seemed to me most interesting in regard to the pretty little French girl who is awaiting trial for the murder of Clarence Glover, the wealthy Waltham man. The young woman who was Hattie's constant companion in prison for weeks was perfectly familiar with all of Hattie's occupations.

Without minding matters, Hattie's chief diversion and most interesting occupation is her own personal appearance. She spends hours doing things, proper and improper, to her face and hair for the complexion. She spends many other hours keeping her clothes in good condition that she may at all ways look as trim and immaculate as she desires.

Perhaps, if you are no longer young and foolish yourself, you may criticize the young prisoner—term her vain and frivolous—suggest that she should be thinking of more serious things. Maybe you will say, "Isn't she the flighty little thing?" and look very shocked.

Like the Average Girl.

But on second thought, is that quite fair? Isn't she very young and untrained? Isn't it only natural that a very young girl who realizes she is soon to appear before the most critical public in a big, murder trial should be chiefly concerned about her personal appearance?

Then again you must take into consideration that Hattie is seeking eternally elusive beauty no more than the average girl with the only difference that the average girl has the seclusion of her own room in which to improve looking well. Is not obliged to inform anyone how she does it.

Hattie LeBlanc, on the other hand, is constantly under surveillance. Everyone in the prison knows what she does and comments on it. Therefore it is possible to know that the former little housemaid goes into the laundry and pounds up starch for face powder; that she also makes frequent visits to the steaming room to steam her face. Afterward she spends half an hour or more massaging her face with cold cream. She has also asked for hot rags for camphorated ice because someone told her it was good for the skin. Every two weeks she wheedles some other prisoner into shampooing her hair. Afterward she sits and fans it and dries it and cares for it just as if she were a society debutante preparing for her first reception.

In fact for debutantes could possibly spend much more time in caring for their beauty than does this little prisoner in the East Cambridge jail. Nearly all her leisure time is devoted either to her skin and hair or to manicuring her nails.

New Dress for Trial.

She expressed a desire to have a fine new robe she suit to wear at her trial. At that time someone suggested that clothes would have very little to do with the outcome and Hattie replied that she wanted to look nice, no matter what came or went.

Her personal appearance and her clothes are her one absorbing interest. She washes and launders her own dresses and is willing to spend any amount of her spare time in making them look fine. She has made a collection of empty spool tops, bleached and ribbonched them and finally made aprons of them. Now, when she is summoned into the office to meet her lawyers or friends, she can don one of them clean white aprons.

She finds more amusement in doing that sort of thing which other people might find too much work than she does in doing light or diverting labor in any other way.

When she can get doors in the yard as much as possible and enjoys the fresh air and sunlight. Other times she studies English from a primer. Sometimes she looks over the large book of picture postcards which have been sent to her from all parts of the country. She never reads or learns, but goes about whistling almost all day.

When Hattie cannot think of anything else to do, she asks to take her fur coat out and look at it. This fur coat is her particular pride. She never lets a month go by without taking it out, looking it over for fear the moths may have injured it, and incidentally displaying it before the admiring eyes of her fellow prisoners.

Has a Box of Ribbons.

At other times she brings out her box of ribbons, which includes a collection made from the many boxes of candy sent in to her and some other ribbons her sisters have sent to her. She has more than a dozen different colors and has the most delightful time trying on first one color and then another. She wears her hair differently than she did when she went to prison. Previously she had combed it high into a pompadour. Now she parts it at one side and waves it around her face, usually tying a wide hat ribbon around it. When she goes to court she intends to wear her hair simply tied at the back of her neck, letting it hang like a school girl.

If it snows by the 28th—the date set for her trial—or is very cold, Hattie will be very happy. That will mean that she can wear her fur coat and still within the bounds of good taste. She is longing for the day to be cold with as much fervor as the little girl who hoped it would rain to make her hair curl.

PUTS AN END TO INDIGESTION AND A SOUR, GASSY, UPSET STOMACH

As there is often some one in your family who suffers an attack of indigestion or some form of Stomach trouble, why don't you keep some Diapepsin in the house handy?

This harmless blessing will digest anything you can eat without the slightest discomfort, and overcome a sour, gassy Stomach five minutes after.

Tell your pharmacist to let you read the formula plainly printed on these 50-cent cases of Pape's Diapepsin, then you will readily see why it makes Indigestion, Sour Stomach, Heartburn and other distress go in five minutes, and relieves at once such miseries as belching of Gas, Eructations of sour undigested food, Nausea, Headaches, Dizziness, Constipation and other stomach disorders.

Some folks have tried so long to find relief from Indigestion and Dyspepsia or an out-of-order stomach with the common every-day cures advertized that they have about made up their minds that they have something else wrong, or believe theirs is a case of Nervousness, Gastritis, Catarrh of the Stomach or Cancer.

This, no doubt, is a serious mistake. Your real trouble is, what you eat does not digest; instead, it ferments and sours, turns to acid, Gas and Stomach poison, which putrefy in the digestive tract and intestines, and, besides, poison the breath with nauseous odors.

A hearty appetite, with thorough digestion, and without the slightest discomfort or misery of the Stomach, is waiting for you as soon as you decide to try Pape's Diapepsin.

GHOSTS WILL REVEL TONIGHT

Goblins and ghosts will hold high carnival throughout Greater Boston tonight. Elaborate preparations have been made at all the large hotels for private parties and thousands of smaller parties will be held in observance of Hallowe'en.

In some of the cafes and hotels there will be pumpkin-faced lights, specially arranged candles, harvest fruit decorations, black cats, witches, cauldrons, and all the other things that mark Hallowe'en as its very own.

The waiters will be garbed as goblins and ghosts and will serve the special meals in ghost-like shrouds, ghastly headgear and all that sort of thing.

In one cafe a special Hallowe'en dinner has been arranged that will cost $5 per plate. There will be a special and continuous entertainment to amuse the patrons at this place. In another place a special menu has been prepared that will cost $5 per plate.

One of the most noteworthy Hallowe'en events will be the Delta Sigma Delta entertainment and dance, tendered seniors of Tufts College by girl students in Boston art schools.

In the hall at Boston College the annual college Hallowe'en social will be observed. Following annual custom, the senior class of the college will act as hosts to the members of the other classes of the institution.

The AMERICAN goes into more homes than all the other evening papers of Boston combined. It is the Quality newspaper.

O'BRIEN STILL IN AUTO IN RACE FOR CONGRESS

Congressional Candidate William H. O'Brien continues his auto campaign against Congressman A. P. Gardner to-day, starting at Gloucester at 9:45. He is accompanied by District Attorney Candidate Charles D. Smith and County Commissioner Patrick H. Murphy. The party tours Gloucester, Rockport, Essex and Manchester, with a rally at the granite quarries at Rockport at noon.

AVOID MEAT TO GET THIN

MRS. GAMBRILL'S RECIPE FOR GETTING THIN.

Abstain from meats of all kinds.
Abstain from liquors of all kinds.
Live on spinach and a few other vegetables.
Take long walks after breakfast and luncheon.

NEWPORT, Oct. 31.—Mrs. Richard Gambrill has solved the riddle of the universe—that is, one of the riddles. She has shown society women how to banish flesh without exiling themselves and spending small fortunes in the capitals of Europe. Mrs. Gambrill has lost at least fifty pounds since she began her new system of life last July. She is the gay matron of the celebration of Newport society, having been fully restored to the graceful figure of youth.

Her simple recipe, stated above, has greatly improved her health, she says, and, as she strolled along Bellevue avenue, she was remarked as one of the graces of the cottage colony, rivaling the beauty of Mrs. Graydon, Mrs. Herman Oelrichs, Mrs. Norman Whitehouse, Mrs. Reginald C. Vanderbilt and Mrs. Hollis McKim.

STOP CAR-RIDE THEFTS.

Acting Chief John F. Murray of the Cambridge police has ordered a crusade to be started against all boys and young men in Cambridge who steal rides on trolley cars. President Bancroft of the Boston Elevated complained to the chief and urged that action be taken at once.

CAVALIERI WILL NOT SUE ESTATE OF CHANLERS

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—Lina Cavalieri Chanler will not take any legal proceedings against the Chanler estate in order to establish her rights under the famous prenuptial contract.

She will not even demand that Robert Winthrop Chanler shall maintain her, although she is his wife.

She will not live with him again.

She has never received so much as a penny from him, she says, nor has she any expectations from the estate will.

She will return to the United States in order to annul her theatrical engagements, as it is necessary for her to earn her living.

These statements were made by a woman more than well known in operatic circles, who has just returned from Paris and who for some years has been an intimate friend and adviser of Lina Cavalieri Chanler.

"Upon everything connected with the controversy," said this woman, "Lina Cavalieri prefers to remain silent. She is at a loss to understand the attitude of Mr. Chanler's family to her, or to divine the reason of their united opposition to her, especially as members of their family have been received at her house.

"The representation of her as a vampire was only too ludicrous to those who knew the real facts of the case. The friendship of Prince Dolgorouki's name into the contest in order to create sympathy for Mr. Chanler is particularly absurd.

"Prince Dolgorouki and Chanler were partners in a motor business in Paris. The Prince lent Mr. Chanler his automobile, and when the wedding party, after breakfast at the Elysee Palace Hotel, drove back to Lina Cavalieri's house, in which Mr. Chanler was to be installed, that section of the party of which Mr. Chanler was in charge occupied the Dolgorouki gasoline chariot, lent by the Prince for the prophetess occasion.

"Complaints and suggestions as to Prince Dolgorouki's presence in this tragi-comedy fell, therefore, to the ground."

MOVING PICTURES OF WORLD'S SERIES

The first moving pictures of the world championship ball games between the Philadelphia Athletics and the Chicago Cubs were shown at B. F. Keith's this afternoon and will be exhibited during the remainder of the week. These pictures, taken during the great games in Philadelphia, are said to be the most wonderful of the kind ever taken. Some of the famous ball players are shown at critical moments in the games.

WOOD EXPLAINS PAYNE-ALDRICH TAX ON WOOL

Republicans today pointed to the speech delivered by William M. Wood at a dinner tendered to him by manufacturers and agents at the Algonquin Club as the best answer to the charges against the Payne-Aldrich tariff, relative to the wool schedule that has yet been made.

Mr. Wood is the head of the American Woolen Company, the largest employer of operatives in the world, with about 45,000 people in New England. Mr. Wood summed up his speech in these words:

"If the protective tariff is destroyed, we manufacturers will be confronted with what we do elsewhere and build our factories where labor is cheapest, but the American workingman cannot do that. They have got to live here and not trade anywhere. This question of protection to American industry is fundamentally a question of the protection of American labor. With our prosperous working men, who to live in decent comfort and send their children to school, there can be no self government here and no republic."

Blames European Makers.

Mr. Wood declared that all the woolen manufacturer makes out of a suit of pure woolen clothing, for a man of ordinary stature, is 38 cents. If President Taft wears a pure woolen suit, Mr. Wood says, the profit to the woolen manufacturer might be fifty cents, but less than one per cent of the cost. Mr. Wood was quite emphatic about it.

This is what the president of the American Woolen Company had to say about Schedule K:

"So long as the great of Europe continues for the great American market, the richest market in the world, so long will the American wool manufacturer be assailed by a rising misrepresentation. Now and then a statement about Schedule K can be traced directly back to some foreign woolen manufacturer or their representatives. It is painful to see how eagerly these misstatements are caught up and exploited for political purposes in this country. A few years ago ex-Attorney General Moody of Ohio repeatedly asserted on the stump that the American Woolen Company fixed the price on the entire wool clip of the United States, and that every one was at the mercy of that monopoly, yet the American Woolen Company is simply a large corporation and not a trust.

38 Cents Profit Per Suit.

"Now at that time there were fifty-two woolen mills in the United States, of which about thirty were owned by the American Woolen Company. In not one of the other mills did this company have the slightest interest, directly or indirectly, in any way whatsoever.

"It may interest the people to know that in our great business, where the cost of production is at the lowest point possible, and in favor of the community at large, the average profit after we have paid the excise on the cloth entering into a suit of clothes does not exceed thirty-eight cents on an average suit of clothing. I read recently that the President of the United States was wearing a suit of clothes for which he paid fifty dollars. Therefore people may like to know that if their suits were purchased from our company our share of the profit in that suit of clothes would be less than fifty cents or less than one per cent of the suit. Does this sound as if schedule K were very ridiculous?

GALVIN HOLDS A RALLY IN MILTON

J. Michel Galvin, Republican candidate for Congress from the Tenth District, spoke at a rally at the Milton Town Hall in Milton today.

"There is no question in this election so important to the people as the tariff," he declared. "The Republican party is making an earnest effort to solve this question by pledging its support to a permanent non-partisan scientific tariff commission, members of which shall be experts, and who will be competent to consider all matters in relation to our country's revenues and to the building of our industries, judiciously and impartially, and more particularly on non-partisan lines.

"The consideration of the tariff by a commission composed of experts will be no new log-rolling, which has been the chief evil in days past."

CITY RALLIES OF DEMOCRATS

In carrying the fight in the Republican strongholds the Democrats have not forgotten that every Democrat vote in Boston will be needed in the coming election and that this will help very much.

A number of rallies will be held every day this week and every ward will be thoroughly canvassed. The list of rallies now arranged is:

Monday Night, Oct. 31—Ward 3, Ward Room, Charlestown District, Bunker Hill street; Ward 20, Ward Room, Meeting House Hill; Ward 24, Oakland Hall, Mattapan square; Ward 18, Trolley club, Whittier and Hampshire streets.

Friday, Nov. 4—Ward 8, Ward Room, Bloomfield street; Ward 5, Ward Room, Franklin School House; Ward 5, to be arranged; Ward 13, to be arranged; Ward 14, to be arranged; Ward 15, to be arranged.

Saturday, Nov. 5—Noon, Faneuil Hall, Scollay square; Ward 7, Ward Room, Dover street Opera House; Ward 2, Lyceum Hall.

SIBLEY A LITTLE BETTER.

FRANKLIN, Pa., Oct. 31.—There was slight improvement today in the condition of ex-Congressman Joseph C. Sibley and his wife. Both are seriously ill, however, and will probably have to be removed to their Winter home in Florida.

DIETRICK OUT TO DEFEAT S. W. M'CALL

Signs are appearing in the political fences against Samuel W. McCall of Winchester, often spoken of as one of the "big men" in Congress, but after a good deal of painstaking care selected against the Eighth Congressional District.

A young Cambridge Democrat is the man who is making the noise in the McCall fences. He is Frederick S. Dietrick. By the stirring campaign that he is making he has got McCall extremely busy at pitching.

It has taken some courage for a young man to make a fight against Congressman so strongly entrenched as Samuel W. McCall.

McCall is a Cannon stalwart and of course to the Cannon machine. McCall is one of the few Massachusetts Congressmen, either Republican or Democratic, who has not recorded himself as against Cannon. McCall also voted against him in the still defending the Payne-Aldrich tariff.

Says McCall Broke Faith.

McCall's Cannonism and his tariff views are responsible for the attack made the fight of young Mr. Dietrick. It is, he says, because McCall has broken faith with his constituents. Dietrick says that he ought not to be returned.

"I have no personal contentions that prompted Mr. McCall for Congress," said Mr. Dietrick, "but in favor of a new tariff. This was a pledge to the voters, the voters of the district, of the present tariff. Therefore, he has broken faith with the people and he ought not again to be elected to office."

Cannonism is the issue in this campaign. Congressman McCall has always supported Speaker Cannon. By voting as he has voted on the last session of Congress and by defending Cannon, of some of his power McCall voted to support Cannon. This alone is sufficient reason why he should be returned.

Cannonism Big Issue.

Candidate Dietrick argues that Cannonism is a big issue of the campaign, and, therefore, McCall is, necessarily, another McCall is a big man in Congress, therefore, a big man Cannon. To defeat Cannon you must destroy his machine. Therefore McCall must be destroyed politically.

Dietrick is 35 years old. He was born in Pennsylvania and graduated from Geneva College there. He is also a graduate of Harvard Law School. He is a practising lawyer, has offices at 84 State street, Boston, and lives at 80 Mount Massachusetts avenue, North Cambridge, which city forms the district he is legislature and was for several years a member of the Board of Aldermen of Cambridge.

The Eighth Congressional District comprises four cities and three towns, Cambridge, Somerville, Medford, Woburn, Arlington, Winchester and Belmont. The district is normally Republican by at least 5,000.

KEITH HOPEFUL OF CAPE FOR G. O. P.

Eben S. B. Keith of Sagamore, ex-State senator and ex-member of the Republican State Committee dropped into Republican headquarters and tried to chirk up the leaders about the Cape situation. Keith succeeded in putting a damper on the chirkiness down on the Cape, the Sagamore considers that he has handled Barnstable and knows, and I always thought I had a pretty fair opportunity for testing public sentiment down there, is sorry as to the result on election day. And I haven't found any indications which show any retreat from the Republican standard."

GILMAN ON STILL HUNT FOR SENATE

Alderman Thomas H. Gilman of Melrose, the Republican Independent candidate for Senator in the Fourth Middlesex District, opposing the regular nominee, Senator W. E. Evans, is doing a great still hunt. The district comprises Malden, Melrose and Everett. Alderman Gilman has been a member of the city government in Melrose for five years. He has yet to meet defeat. He favors an income tax, direct nominations, and the popular election of United States Senators. He is a member of Episcopalian Union No. 12.

Political Notes.

"T. J. G." Roxbury": The Tammany Club members who served in the House of Representatives from Ward 17 in 1907 were James J. Conboy and Frederick J. Gow. Sherman Jernglin J. Gow served previously.

* * *

These men are being heard on the stump for Congressman Keliher in his canvass for votes for re-election: David R. Shaw, Thomas J. Gibbin, John J. Dolphin, Patrick Morris, Dr. Joseph Santosuosso, Isaac Gordon, Councillors Attridge and McDonald, Lawyer John J. Walsh, Thomas J. Grant, James J. Mellen, Emile Zolin, City Committeeman Michael J. Donovan, Wilfred J. Dercourt, Daniel J. Sullivan and Arthur Harrington. Most of them have held public office.

* * *

Former Councilman Thomas M. Joyce, Independent Democratic candidate for the House of Representatives in Ward 17, at Tenth Suffolk parties in Ward 17 this week. Timothy L. Connolly, former Tammany leader, has arranged them.

* * *

Politics certainly makes strange bedfellows. Who would have thought that former Alderman Thomas J. Gibbs of East Boston would stand in an automobile and speak in favor of members of the Hendrick Club. He did it, though, and few voters of that ward heard him. The "gibs" says he meant what he said.

* * *

Rallies for Frederick Dietrick, candidate for Congress against Sam McCall, James Welch, candidate for Governor Attorney and the local candidates for Senator and Representative are arranged as follows: In Somerville tonight at Union square, Magoun square, Davis square and Gilman square.

* * *

Franz Hugo Krebs has hired Tremont Temple for next Thursday night and wants James H. Vahey to debate the question with him. Krebs will support Draper.

* * *

The following is received from James Irwin, Democratic candidate against District Attorney John J. Higgins in Middlesex County: "I note that John J. Higgins, Esq., district attorney for Middlesex County and Republican candidate for re-election, has used four columns to make a statement respecting the Glover case and the Russell case in an answer to the four one questions which I put to him at certain rallies and in an open letter through the press. Neither the Russell case nor the Glover case were referred to in any way in the fourteen questions, and no responsive answers to the questions have ye been made through the press, and I have not had a line from Mr. Higgins in reply. However, while waiting for Mr. Higgins to prepare his answers to the questions I will take up the issue he has raised in the Glover case. I have made no investigation of the conduct in the Russell case and have said nothing about it. I am as polished at the publicity given by Mr. Higgins as a district attorney to the secret indictment in the Glover case and the opportunity he gives the accused to escape. Now that he has brought the matter in issue I make for his information that the indictment was found several months ago and that the accused, although living openly within the county has never been placed under arrest on that indictment. I now ask Mr. Higgins whether the accused is still at liberty because of friendship between the accused and Mr. Charles J. Weir, the assistant district attorney in Mr. Higgins' office. I am sending Mr. Higgins a copy of this letter."

Thomas P. Riley is one of the wittiest orators in the campaign. Riley usually precedes Foss on the stump and has the crowd worked to a pitch of excitement when the candidate for Governor arrives on the scene.

* * *

The Republicans claim Mashpee's total vote for Draper. The Democrats generally have two votes there.

* * *

James H. Carmichael, who is making the Democratic congressional fight in the Fifth District against Butler Ames, is found to get a whopping big vote in Lowell. Carmichael has always run well as a shortstop, and for a district so much of free he should be able to increase the strength which he has secured as alderman.

* * *

Norman White, the unbridled, is pitching hot shot into Martin M. Lomasney and John F. Fitzgerald outside of Boston when he tried to stop talking for him the other night the audience yelled to him to continue.

* * *

James M. Swift, the candidate on the Republican side for Attorney-General, is not taking any chances. He has been using a little Senate hour of his own, letting the people look him over and answering such questions as may arise.

* * *

John Quinn, Jr., the Democratic councilor candidate in Boston, has decided that even is a mystic figure as far as he is concerned. He comes from ward 7, he was counted out first by seven votes, seven wards were recounted and there are seven wards in his district. His total vote on the recount shows three sevens in it and he says this is the seventh time he has made up his mind he would like to go to the Council.

* * *

Among the mistakes on the Republican side the fight against Arthur Nason in the Haverhill district is now put down as number one. It was a losing fight from the start and then it was carried on in such a way that bad blood was certain to come out of it. The net result will be a loss to the head of the Republican ticket.

* * *

Two ministers are running for the Senate this year. Melville N. Nash from Hanover who has been there one year, and the Rev. Usman R. Swett of West Roxbury. Mr. Nash always wears a white lawn tie and Mr. Swett never.

OUTSIDE DEMOCRATS COMING TO HELP IN THIS WEEK'S RALLIES

To the aid of Candidate Foss, distinguished Democrats from all over the country are rallying. Governor Folk of Missouri, Congressman-elect Daniel J. McGillicuddy of Lewiston, Me., and Governor-elect Plaisted of Maine will make speeches in Massachusetts during the coming week. The State Committee has arranged hundreds of rallies for the week covering every section of the State and all the spellbinders will have to work overtime.

Letters encouraging Foss have been received from Senator Gore of Oklahoma, Judson P. Harmon of Ohio, and Woodrow Wilson.

On Monday night rallies will be held in Springfield, Chicopee, Westfield and Holyoke, at all of which Foss will speak. North Attleboro, Mansfield and North Adams, where Mayor Fitzgerald will be heard; and at Westboro, Upton, Grafton, Amesbury, Newburyport, West Barnstable, Osterville and Centreville.

On Tuesday Foss, Cassidy, Vahey and Mayor Fitzgerald will speak in Cambridge, Newton, Watertown, Waltham, Somerville and Chelsea, and there will be rallies in Holyoke, Chicopee, Bridgewater and Middleboro.

On Wednesday there will be rallies in Fitchburg, Leominster, Clinton, Salem, Danvers, Peabody, Marblehead, Gloucester, and Manchester. There will be a big rally in Fall River and a French rally in New Bedford. There will be rallies in Ayer, Sharon, Stoughton, Randolph, Malden, Calumet, North and West Falmouth, Hanover and Hudson.

THE FOSS EIGHT-HOUR LETTER

This is the Letter Which Mr. Foss Says He Never Wrote

IS IT A FORGERY, MR. FOSS?

To his Excellency,
Hon. Eben S. Draper,
Governor of the Commonwealth,
State House, Boston, Mass.

Dear Sir:

We, the undersigned, respectfully state that we are engaged in business in this state, and that we believe that the enactment of such a law as House Bill #1593, which provides that employers shall not permit certain workmen engaged on work for state, county, city or town to work more than eight hours per day or forty-eight hours per week, will prove detrimental to the interests of the state, the several counties, cities and towns; to our interests as employers; and also to the interests of our employes.

We are now operating our plants more than forty-eight hours per week and are obliged to do so, as we are in competition with manufacturers whose working hours are from fifty-four to sixty per week.

It will not be feasible for us to undertake work for the state, counties, cities or towns on which our employes are to work but eight hours per day while fellow-workmen engaged on similar work for other customers, and working side by side, are working nine hours or more per day. If this Bill becomes a law, it will for this reason result in reducing the number of manufacturers who can undertake work for the state, counties, cities and towns; it will increase the cost of the work; and much public work which is now being done in the state by citizens of the state will inevitably be done in other states, lines 9 and 10 of Section 2 limiting the restrictions to those working in this Commonwealth.

It is frequently necessary for our employes to work overtime,--and for this overtime work it is customary to pay a higher rate of wages, and our employes usually welcome the opportunity to work overtime.

(This is an exact reproduction of the first page)

-2-

We believe that such a law is not needed for the protection of the working people or desired by the majority of the people of the state.

We believe that such a law would be unconstitutional.

For these and other reasons we hope and trust that you will veto the Bill.

Yours respectfully,

B. F. Shumway, G.
E. K. Foss Trs

Mr. Hearst Tells Why He Cannot Support Roosevelt

'DIX IS MURPHY'S POTTED PLANT, FERTILIZED BY CRIMINAL TRUSTS'

'ROOSEVELT ONLY SUBSTITUTED FOR BOSS BARNES BOSS ROOT, WHO IS MUCH MORE DANGEROUS'

"Election of Tammany Ticket with Two Years of Corruption Would Strengthen Roosevelt for 1912. League Nominees Should Be Choice of All Sincere Citizens."

From the New York World of Oct. 30.

New York, Oct. 28, 1910.

To the Editor of the World:

An editorial in your paper Wednesday refers to me as a supporter of or rather a "co-operator with" Mr. Roosevelt.

This is not in strict accordance with the facts. During my sojourn abroad this Summer your correspondent frequently interviewed me and often asked my opinion of Mr. Roosevelt's actions, utterances and intentions.

You must know perfectly well from the opinions I expressed in these interviews which were published in your columns that I am not in any sense a supporter of Mr. Roosevelt.

I knew him to be astonishingly inconsistent, and I cannot reconcile so great inconsistency with sincerity or with high purpose.

"Vain, Reckless and Erratic."

I know him to be ambitious, vain and selfish, reckless and erratic, and I do not consider these qualities compatible with a sound policy or a safe conduct of public affairs.

I expressed these opinions freely in my several interviews in the World and in public letters, and was among the first to assail the Gibraltar of Mr. Roosevelt's popularity.

The air is now full of denunciation of Mr. Roosevelt, some of it wholly deserved and some of it entirely unjust and undeserved.

But when I first wrote my criticisms of Mr. Roosevelt from abroad and the reporters of the New York papers sought to obtain interviews with leading citizens on the questions raised in those letters, fully 90 per cent. of the citizens interrogated replied that they agreed fully with the opinions expressed, but did not desire to be quoted in the matter.

I was an opponent of Mr. Roosevelt and a critic of his un-American attitude abroad when the gentlemen who are now defaming him were too cowardly to express their views.

No So Much His Opponent Now.

I am not so much an opponent of Mr. Roosevelt since I have come to appreciate the cowardice and mean methods and motives of many who are now attacking him.

I am not a "co-operator with Mr. Roosevelt," yet I am not so prejudiced or so partisan that I would not co-operate with Mr. Roosevelt or any other man should he be, or at any time become, sincerely engaged in some worthy and commendable undertaking.

When, for instance, Mr. Roosevelt declared that it was his intention to drive the corrupt bosses out of the Republican party in New York State, I expressed a willingness to aid him in that particular praiseworthy purpose.

Having myself long been engaged in the attempt to drive corrupt bosses out of the Democratic party, and out of the Republican party, I could not conscientiously or to make a place for Hearst himself." This left the squalid issue of personal recognition I sent the following letter on September 30:

consistently refuse aid to any one whom I believed to be earnestly engaged in a similar act.

Deposed Barnes, Installed Root.

But Mr. Roosevelt's opposition to bosses is too personal, too limited, too restricted. With Mr. Roosevelt bossism is a local issue, as the tariff was with Mr. Hanna. Mr. Roosevelt, as you state, objects to Boss Lorimer, who objects to Mr. Roosevelt, and fraternizes with Boss Cox, who approves of Mr. Roosevelt. In his own State Mr. Roosevelt did no more than to depose Boss Barnes, who was his personal enemy, and install as boss of the State Republican party Mr. Root, who is his personal friend.

I consider Mr. Root as a boss much more dangerous than Mr. Barnes and much more discreditable than Mr. Barnes. Mr. Root is probably the most conspicuous exponent in the country of that corrupt alliance between political bosses and criminal corporations which Mr. Roosevelt publicly pretends to denounce.

Mr. Root, described by Mr. Whitney as the one lawyer who could tell a man how to do whatever he wanted to do, has put that peculiar faculty to unfathomable use from the time that he defended Tweed for political thievery down to the time that he has protected Ryan in his financial jobbery.

Bosses Must Be Dealt With.

Mr. Roosevelt's substitution of one boss for another and a worse boss did not drive the bosses out of the Republican party. They are still there to be reckoned with, and, if I mistake not, to be dealt with, for I have come to believe that Mr. Roosevelt's idea of a square deal is any deal that squares with his own interests and ambitions.

I simply could not stand with Mr. Roosevelt, linked as he was bodily and spiritually with Chauncey M. Depew and all that he represents on one side, and Elihu Root and all that he represents on the other.

If Mr. Roosevelt had consistently fought bossism in this State and throughout the nation, I should have co-operated with him. If he had gotten out of the corrupt party in order to fight them effectively, I should have strongly supported him.

I know that it requires courage to get out of a comfortable though corrupt party and take a cold plunge into strange but clean waters. Still, I would not have asked Mr. Roosevelt to do any more than I myself have done. Mr. Roosevelt, however, is not given to taking cold plunges. He runs promiscuously up and down the beach with his bathing suit on, but he does not go into the water.

Doesn't Accord with Facts.

Your editorial further states that "it was agreed that Hearst's party should indorse Mr. Roosevelt's ticket in New York, and that Mr. Roosevelt's candidate for Lieutenant-Governor should be withdrawn statement is still less in accordance with the facts.

William Randolph Hearst.

On the 20th of September I gave an interview to your correspondent in which I repeated the statement that I had already made to him to the effect that I would not, under any circumstances, myself be a candidate for Governor in this campaign. I said definitely:

I do not consider any man my friend who suggests that I become a candidate for Governor. I cannot have it said that my continual activity in politics is merely for my personal advancement.

I will not run for Governor myself, but I will do more to prove my manifold devotion to the cause. If the Independence shall nominate a sound progressive for Governor I shall accept a nomination for some minor office on the ticket and do my best to elect the head of the ticket and bring out the Independent vote.

The following day your correspondent asked me if my statement to the World could be interpreted to mean that I would accept a minor nomination on the Republican ticket, and I forwarded a written reply, which read:

Certainly not. I am an Independence Leaguer. I would do anything to help the League, but I would not accept any nomination, large or small, on the Republican ticket.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

This declaration of mine you printed also.

Sometimes Yielded to Friends.

I am always an advocate of a straight Independence League ticket, and, while I have yielded on occasions to the opinions of my associates, my personal conviction is that the establishment of a new party, permanently devoted to the interests of the people, is of more importance than a temporary victory in any given election.

I am and have been heartily in favor of the Independence League ticket as constituted in this campaign. I found little to support in the Republican program and much to oppose in the traitorous betrayal of the people's interests by the democratic party.

I advised against fusion with the Republican party, and in reply to a suggestion for a fusion with the Democratic party I consented to the nomination of Mr. Dix, but I did not consent to the nomination of Mr. Murphy's candidate for Governor, Mr. Dix.

Mr. Dix is Mr. Murphy's politician potted plant. He has been raised from a seed which Mr. Murphy planted in the fat and foul mould of Tammany Hall. He is a forced hothouse growth, raised under glass in the fetid atmosphere of machine politics. The position of chairman of the Democratic State Committee. He was brought out to his feet just to be nominated for Governor. Mr. Murphy's private convention, as Mr. Murphy's pet candidate for Governor, but if the citizens do their duty he is doomed to be nipped by an early frost on the 8th of November next.

Trusts Fertilized Murphy's Plant.

Mr. Murphy's potted plant has been freely fertilized by the criminal trusts, and the soil that stimulates Mr. Dix's political growth has been made rich with the corruption of corporation campaign funds.

Mr. Dix is supported by every criminal combination which has increased the cost of living and is seeking an opportunity through Mr. Dix's election to increase it still further.

Mr. Dix's mills were parties to such a criminal combination until that combination was condemned by the courts.

After that the combination still continued under the form of a "gentlemen's agreement." The outward form, which the courts had denounced, was eliminated, but the inward fact which constituted the combination remained.

A gentlemen's agreement" is an agreement among the kind of gentlemen whose Spartan code does not forbid the gentlemanly accomplishments of theft and falsehood. If only these be undetected.

There is honor among thieves, but only enough honor to unite them in their thievery.

Dix a "Gentlemanly Raffles."

Mr. Dix was for nearly two years a beneficiary of the wall paper combination during the time that its operations were before the courts, and has since been a gentlemanly Raffles, participating in the benefits of the dissolved trust's "gentlemen's agreement."

The public is no longer innocent enough to believe that a public prosecution dissolves a trust or that it does more than cause a trust to abandon the particular feature upon which it can legally be attacked.

The indictment of the Beef Trust did not dissolve the beef combination; the prosecution of the Standard Oil Trust has not disrupted that combination. And Mr. Dix's trust has not ceased to be a combination to inflate prices, although it has taken the more polite form of a "gentlemen's agreement."

The request of Mr. Dix's interests through his partner and campaign manager, Mr. Hoppock, for a higher tariff is so infinitely and distinctly a matter of record that it is not open to denial or discussion.

And as we come to the final question of the sweatshop hours and sweatshop wages of Mr. Dix's employes.

I have investigated this matter with extreme care and have stated the facts with extreme conservatism. The facts are that Mr. Dix works a multitude of his employes thirteen hours a day and pays them $1.75 a day or less for this life-destroying labor.

The facts are that Mr. Dix, instead of reducing these killing hours, has lately increased them.

The facts are that the great majority of laborers in other paper mills of the country receive over $2 a day and work only eight hours a day.

$1.75 a Day for 13 Hours' Work.

The facts are that Mr. Dix's employes were receiving $1.65 a day for twelve hours' work, and when they asked for a small increase of 10 cents a day were told that they could only receive that raise if they would consent to work thirteen hours a day for five days in the week.

These poor, hard-driven laborers consented to do so and Mr. Dix is now paying his laborers $1.75 a day for thirteen hours of work. Moreover, Mr. Dix gets back the greater part of his miserly $1.75, for he owns the houses in which the men live and charges them for rent all that the meagre tariff will bear."

He was nominated by Mr. Murphy in consultation with the agents of the trusts and of the New York Central and Pennsylvania railroads.

Mr. Dix has been proven by documentary evidence to have been associated with the criminal Wall Paper Trust, the sole object of which was to raise prices. Mr. Dix, through his partner and campaign manager, Mr. Hoppock, has been shown to have favored a higher tariff than the present one on rubber cuffs of the Republican party and to have asked for an increase over the present tariff of 25 per cent. to 45 per cent. on wall paper such as his mills produce.

I am afraid it is hopelessly impossible for the World to "explode" these so-called "charges," but that the charitable explanations may still have some chance to obtain my $1,000 I will agree to give it all if the World will merely disprove the fact that Mr. Dix works a large proportion of his laborers thirteen hours a day.

These being the facts I cannot see why the World or any other fair-minded opponent of Mr. Roosevelt should not do as I do and support the Independence League ticket instead of this discredited Tammany ticket of Dixes and Conways and Frawleys and Gradys.

The Independence League ticket is a selective ticket. It is composed of the strongest men in the Independence Party and the best men selected from the tickets of the Republican party and the Democratic party.

Nearly all of these candidates so selected have stood a pebble to bring about an honest primary law, a Federal income tax, downward revision of the tariff, public ownership of public utilities, the referendum, the initiative, the recall and instruction of the voters, the election of the people of United States Senators, and all the reforms which the World has demanded.

For years the World and Brisbane have been opposition to Murphy and to Tammany, but Murphy and Tammany in control of the State is worse than Murphy and Tammany out of the city.

Furthermore, it means the restoration of Murphy and Tammany to control of the city. The World knows that if it helps Murphy was attempting to nominate Guggenheim for Governor, the World printed a cartoon headed "Ring to Come Back," and it has had to nobly resist the temptation of showing Murphy endeavoring to reestablish his power through securing control of the State.

"Trying to Come Back."

Murphy and Tammany are now "trying to come back" through Mr. Dix and the remainder of the State ticket, which is all Murphy and Tammany.

The individuals or institutions who are supporting Mr. Murphy's Tammany State ticket are doing their best, or rather their worst, to re-establish Tammany Hall and restore in this unhappy city the rule of the Tammany rascals which a union of good citizens in the last election had succeeded in disrupting.

I wrote to the World from Paris that in my opinion Mr. Roosevelt would never again hold an important public office in the United States, but I did not count upon the astonishing stupidity of Mr. Roosevelt's enemies.

Those individuals and institutions which are supporting Mr. Murphy's Tammany State ticket, are unwittingly doing their utmost to exalt Mr. Roosevelt. No matter how wrong Mr. Roosevelt may be in many of the things which he advocates, he is the opposite to Tammany Hall and if you elect Tammany Hall to control in this State Mr. Roosevelt will be proved to be right every day to the forthcoming crops of corruption and scandal.

Every day for the next shameful two years Mr. Roosevelt will point to the public record of Tammany in the State of New York and say to the Nation, "This is what I opposed. Was I not right in opposing it?"

And the answer may be the nomination of Mr. Roosevelt for the Presidency in 1912, a situation which all true Americans should contemplate with serious concern.

League Offers a Remedy.

It would be a bad situation at present in this State if the honest and earnest citizen had only to choose between the Republican and Democratic tickets of Murphy and the corruption of Tammany Hall.

But the Independence League has nominated a man for Governor whom any citizen or any party can properly support.

The legislative ticket behind Mr. Hooper, selected from all parties, is the only ticket which can be counted upon to support any honest Governor. The remainder of the ticket is superior to either of the other tickets in the field. There is no reason why any sincere citizen should not support the Independence League ticket. There is every reason, indeed, why citizens, anxious to retake both Roosevelt and Tammanyism, are anxious to actually secure necessary political reforms, should vote for the Independence League ticket.

And if every such citizen does vote for the Independence League ticket Mr. Hooper will be elected, a selected and pledged legislative body will also be elected to uphold his hands, and the State of New York will receive the best government it has had in many years.

CORNELL IN NIGHT SIGNAL DRILL FOR GAME WITH HARVARD

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS

PARKE TELLS WHY HARVARD TEAM IS SUPERIOR TO YALE

The Family Upstairs---Mr. Dingbat Has Good News for the Sewing Circle — By Herriman

EXPERT COMPARES THE HARVARD-YALE TEAMS

By E. V. B. Parke.

Coming as the climax over the Army Stadium at West Point tomorrow afternoon, the annual football game between Harvard and Yale presents unusually excellent opportunity to determine as far as comparative strength of Harvard and Yale elevens and the outcome of next Saturday's game with Princeton. Yale has already met and defeated the Army, while Harvard has yet to play the Cadets. Therefore, a comparison of the Harvard and Yale elevens with the Army team will be of great interest to followers of the game, irrespective of the fact that such development takes place in the future. It is likely to occur in the latter, taking into consideration the outcome of the Princeton game, the development or lack of development to make no difference in calculations.

To roughly compare Yale and Harvard on the basis of their games with the Army, it would be found that Harvard's chief foe last season defeated the Army by the score of 6 to 0, while Yale made touchdowns in the first and second halves, respectively, and the Army scored but one first down. Therefore, judging from the Army game alone, Yale was the more powerful machine of the two, but Harvard's defeat was by a close score, and a change may be held to be in order. Harvard's defeat was due to a fumble and a forward pass, and had no such work been in the line-up of one or the other team, the game might have gone to either side. The two elements must have entered into the making of the score of 6 to 0 between the Crimson and the Army, and only one of the Cadets could get away.

After that either McKay or Washington, at which players the scouting system has ensured the play either for a rush of ten yards or so, or at times a run, and were the play was entirely abandoned when it became all too evident to the Army that the Harvard line was impregnable and one not to be fooled by such a play as that. Either this means that the Crimson backs know more football than do the Blue, or that the latter were a poor team to show in furthering the formation, for frequently worked against them. Could which ever way you choose, and you come to the inevitable conclusion that Harvard's line is the superior.

There was a fault in the Crimson team, however, and that seemed to be that its backfield developed, or rather was forced by the opponents rushing, when which ran afoul of the enemy's goal. At such times the Harvard line lost in destructiveness in the presence of uniformity of action or precision. Teamwork existed at other times, to indicate this weakness and strengthen it, the fill it reaches the stage where it is a consistent opener of holes and always to be depended upon. Such a period Harvard would have to be obtained, and this cannot be looked for, but this same weakness has been noticeable in practically every game against weaker lines.

What can probably fill, be done at Cambridge during the next several weeks, will be to so solidify the running of the rushing that it will better protect its backfield, for in most of the cases where Harvard has been held within the shadow of its enemy's goal posts, the would not have occurred had the running game been well covered up. At that the Harvard line was better protection to its runner than was the Yale line, and here again the Crimson is superior.

The old habit of fumbling has cropped out among the players of Harvard, and on Saturday's probably cost the Crimson a touchdown. Such a habit is a serious affair under the best of circumstances, but when one stops to consider that the other team may receive loose balls on a fumble, and unfortunately it is the end who is referred at the time, especially under punts, it brings us to a comparison of the ends of the two colleges.

While Kilpatrick of Yale is one of the best wing gunmen in the game, is begins to look doubtful whether he will have anything on either Soden or Lewis before the season is over. Neither of these men have the defensive qualities, but with both on end will produced Harvard undoubtedly surpasses the Blue in this department.

Yale's Forwards Outclassed.

But to return to the question of the line of Yale and Harvard, the latter is the best because the Army forwards were able to get the jump on their opponents. This is the case with the Crimson for backs. And there can be no question but that the Harvard backfield was better organized and superior to the Crimson line, and the Army backs were generally outplayed by the Harvard backfield. Harvard found opponents over too quickly to make use of their scoring ability in this one game in their backs, while the backs in addition were quickly thrown back in the operation. Harvard men. At practically no time did the Yale backs penetrate either of the Army lines or backs in the manner of the Harvard players, and here again is a point in favor of the Crimson.

While Corbett is regarded by many as the best all-round player on the Yale team, he is decidedly inferior to Coy in the matter of running back kicks, while Wigglesworth's excelling on straight quarterback plunges through the line.

Yale is ready, no one in the backfield who has done anything on the backs of which is inferior to that of Harvard. Coy is the only one of the Crimson backs who has shown anything like the form displayed by Corbett in his scoring runs in Pennsylvania. Here again the Crimson is given added strength while Yale still has tried forth to compare with him. Howe, Corey and Garrett have been tried out for quarter at Eli town, but none of them have given any evidence of possessing the ability of either Wigglesworth or Potter.

Relative to the inability of Harvard to gain at times when within striking distance of the enemy's goal posts, much may be said. It is but natural that the opponents line should stiffen when a score is impending, and under the new rules the runner is relying on his own ability as it is. To judge from the past, many times teams of all colleges have been held within the shadow of their own goal posts, bringing one to the inevitable conclusion that the new rules have made it impossible for any team to be a consistent ground gainer throughout the season.

Thin Hair

Isn't Necessary at All, and Unless Falling Is Stopped Will Result in Baldness.

The man or woman who just lets the hair fall, get thin and gradually disappear will be sorry when baldness actually comes that such a sterling, dependable remedy as Lorrimer's Excelsior Hair Tonic was not used in time. Permitting enemies of healthy hair, such as sandruff, scurf, etc., to sap the life of the hair is sure to lead to more serious hair troubles and baldness. Do as Arthur W. Ingham of 199 Mt. Vernon Av., Rochester, did:

Have some locks of your hair. Hunger, tear, dandruff, dead hair, scurf, itching, scaly scalp.

Get a bottle of Lorrimers' Excelsior Hair Tonic at Riker-Jaynes or of your nearest druggist and prove its value to you. Get it to-day.

CORNELL TEAM IN NIGHT DRILL

ITHACA, Oct. 31.—The Cornell varsity begins its finishing practice today for the Harvard game, with the best balanced team it has had for many years. The schedule this week includes four hard scrimmages with night signal work in the Armory.

The team will leave Thursday night for Cambridge.

Coach Reed says the record has by far the best backfield in the Eastern colleges this year, but they will not show the hoodoo against Harvard that has troubled in some years.

He expects to keep Seagraves at right end, and will play Miller of last year's freshman team at center. Seagraves showed great possibilities in Saturday's game.

Butcher, the drop kicker will probably not be able to play for a few weeks but will be back in time for the game if he has a chance to drop kick a goal is seen.

It is the opinion here at Ithaca that Captain Simpson would not keep his place at full back unless he recovers from his slump. Wilson, a new man brought on last week, has shown himself a sufficient line plunger and better on the interference for the backs.

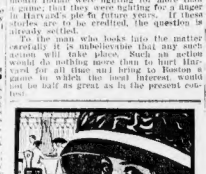
Hinter and O'Connor will have the whole of the kicking. Chamberlain may not play and Meckle or Bourke, who is as good, will fill his place at Guard.

COACHES RUSH TO AID YALE ELEVEN

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Oct. 31.—Yale has sent out a hurry call for coaches to whip the Eli eleven into shape for the great battle with Harvard. Among the coaches who will devote most of their time this week with the team are: Tom Shevlin, Gordon Brown, Fred Murphy, Ted Coy, Dr. W. F. Bull, George Adee, Frank Hinkey, Foster Sanford, Walter Camp, Jack Owsley, L. H. Bigbee and Winter Cornish. Fred Murphy and Ted Coy will probably remain here the rest of the season.

Captain Fred Daly said today that the work of the Yale eleven in the game against Colgate had been very satisfactory and that this week would be used to round the team into shape. There will be three days of scrimmaging and two for light practice and individual coaching.

The circulation of the AMERICAN is 200,000 more than its next highest competitor and 75,000 more than all the other evening papers of Boston combined.



PLAN HORSE RACES ON ICE AT MEDFORD

There is talk of flooding Combination Park, Medford, this Winter, if the weather conditions are right, to get the horses in shape who will be shipped to Canada for the ice races at Toronto, Ottawa, Montreal and other points. One thing seems certain and that is more American horses will compete in the Dominion races than have been seen in Canada in years, and the fact that the Boston trotter, John Kay, 2 10½, will make the Canadian circuit is only a starter. There also promises to be seen the greatest season of racing on the snow known in Boston in years at the Charles River Speedway.

TUG-OF-WAR IS TECH FIELD DAY FEATURE

Technology "sophs" and "freshies" meet Friday afternoon in the tooth annual field day. Field Brooklyn will be the two classes engage in a football game, hockey race and in an indoor forgotten sport—these parts of the college world, the tug-of-war, in which fifty men will engage.

PREPARATORY LEAGUE OPENS SERIES FRIDAY

The first game of the Preparatory League series will be played next Friday, when Cambridge Latin meets Newton High at Newtonville. Cambridge Latin did better against Waltham High than Newton and should win. The Cambridge team is more experienced, but will find the Orange and Black team an aggregation not easily overcome. The work of Newton High against Worcester High was a surprise. The latter, outweighing the Newton boys, were beaten by speed and better execution of plays. The game was marred by much wrangling, the Worcester boys objecting to decisions.

HARVARD HAS STRONG TEAM, DECLARES DEAN

Commenting on the Harvard-Army game, Dudley Dean, the Crimson's quarterback in 1896, said: "Harvard is strong, but not wonderfully so. The present game takes one back twenty years in some respects. In 1896 we didn't have the onside kick or the forward pass; our interference in the open was not so good as now; we could, however, pull and push the runner, and this last was a good offset to the first.

"Seven men had to be on the line of scrimmage, just as now. It was then a case of the team that knew the fundamentals, had one or two brilliant, fast backs, and had a good drop kicker and punter.

"Of course, other elements can't be too unequal, but these factors will pretty nearly tell the story in 1910, as in 1896."

NATIONAL BILLIARD TOURNEY OPENS TODAY

By Ed. Cogswell.

Boston, the home of safety billiard players!

Local devotees of the game may not know that this is what the knights of the cue in other cities lay to our door, but such is the fact.

Only the other day, when the question came up as to why Boston did not turn out better experts, players fully capable of coping with those from abroad—meaning outside of New England—the reply came from a visiting ex-champion at the 18.2 balk line that this part of the major world not develop stars till the ones engaged in playing gave up, or forgot, the safety play, and settle down to the deep study of inside billiards.

He, furthermore, related that in spending many months in this city he has yet to know of another place where nearly every billiard player—those devoting an hour or so daily to the game, were so particularly careful in studying out how to leave the balls safe, doing so in preference to attempting to roll the ball in getting the next shot.

The result of his argument was to give the boosters a session at meditating over what he said, and the remedy. Possibly they have solved the problem. This is the scheme.

In order to make safety playing impossible it will be the rule to permit the use of either the spot or white ball in the opening shot. Of course, through the rephasher of the finish of the player must keep the ball originally picked, for when one slips up on a shot he is supposed to hit the same privilege of playing with either of the white balls.

Just think this over, billiard players, and it is my belief that if those wishing to learn to improve their billiards will forget this rule they will soon find that their stroke, accuracy in keeping the balls together, the nursing act, and in fact goes to make good billiards, will be greatly improved.

The National Amateur Three-Cushion tournament begins tonight at the Imperial when New York contends with Boston here for three day's play. It has been decided that William Blumenthal will play for New York, while Allen Mason is to do the honors for Boston. There is wide interest in this tournament, and a large gallery is assured.

While Hoppe, the king of all billiard players, will be at Moses Yatter's studio Thursday evening to remain till Saturday night, having three nights and two matinees. He will tackle Mr. Yatter, and George Carter, the last two named at 18.2, while he plays 18.1.

Just what handicap this style of play amounts to the local fans haven't gotten any further than the arguing stage. There isn't any way of determining what the allowance is until the players get started. On the surface it would appear that it is about 50 per cent, but don't bet that great. Both Yatter and Carter being open players minimizes this considerably.

Both players have been practicing diligently for the match, and in their sessions during the past week they have both shown excellent form. Carter is in fine stroke and everything indicates that the match will be very interesting.

Thomas Hueston, ex-title owner, is certainly a persevering young chap. Hueston has posted forfeits to accompany his challenges to the winner of the forthcoming matches for the three-cushion and pool titles. He has paid them both, not at the same time. Alfred De Oro is also ambitious to own both titles. He is the three-cushion king, but has been challenged by John Dutra. De Oro will play Champion Jerome Keogh for the pool title in New York late next month. Hueston's challenges are for the winners of these two matches.

George Sosnow has rented the entire third floor in the Silver Building, Thirty-first street and Broadway, New York, where he will open on November 12 a new billiard parlor, one of the largest in America.

Champion H. Keogh, the pool champion, has a new "open break," which he believes will add new life to the game. He says:

"It is simply a difference in the break that the game varies from the regular one. The balls at first are broken as usual, and when all the balls have been pocketed the frame is racked up again and the player shoots the last ball in the frame in and breaks the lunch. He keeps on shooting until he misses.

"I believe that the open break not only will improve the game for spectators, but also will result in the establishment of records and averages that would indicate relative abilities of players, as is now the case in billiards. It will do away with the safety play."

12 RACES ON CARD FOR MET'S MATINEE

The Metropolitan Driving Club has a dozen races slated for its matinee on the Charles River speedway tomorrow, with the promise of some of the best sport of the Fall.

For the first time in many months the racing champion of the river road, Chief Wilkie, has a competitor that looks up to making it interesting for the half-mile track warrior Gallagher 2:03¼.

COOT SHOOTING BEST IN YEARS

By Dick Carpenter.

So keen is the interest in coot shooting among a large number of New England sportsmen that it is a pleasure to introduce to the followers of this column one of the men in New England who is best qualified to say the last word on the subject of coots and coot shooting.

A few days ago I made some remarks about the ability of a certain man in Boston to cook a coot so that it would pass for duck. I am beginning to believe that it is possible.

At any rate I wish to give some extracts here from a very interesting letter from H. D. Wakefield of Bar Harbor, who has shot coots for business and for sport for some twenty years and who is recognized by the Maine sportsmen as the champion of the State in that line. He says:

"This seems to be the banner year in coot shooting. The birds are plentiful, fly better and taste better. I really believe that a coot can be cooked so that it will not be told from a duck. There are six different species of coot and one particular kind, the white wing coot, can be so cooked that it is hard to tell the difference.

"The white-winged coot is quite large, sometimes weighs from seven to nine pounds. As their diet is wholly of vegetable matter they have not the oily, fish taste noticeable in other birds. The only way to get the bird to be fat on coot is to feed, reach the feeding grounds early and then wait. But it is hard to get them for they are foxy.

"The brown, black, butterball and bobtail coot can be shot in several ways. They will fly to decoys in large flocks when the wind and weather are favorable and I have, single handed, in one morning shot 200 of them. Foggy days are preferable, as on such days they fly continuously. I have had a flock of forty-two birds fly to my decoys, and succeeded in killing all but four of them.

"Of course the best shooting perhaps is for the sea ducks and divers, which are larger, better and come in larger flocks, to tear out this statement I will say that during last November and December I shot 500 sea ducks. They fly to decoys and if you use a noise similar to a wild duck, only not so loud, you can call them up so that you can almost entice them on the muzzle of your gun. Occasionally I have shot flocks that weighed eighty-four and over and a half pounds each.

"I am one who contends that coot shooting gives a man a certain skill in the handling of a gun which cannot be gained at the traps. At least my experience in shooting with men accustomed to shooting clay pigeons seems to bear out that statement.

"Personally I am not prepared to say anything about the merit of the men who shoot at the traps, and those who cling to lodges in northern snow storms and get sixteen birds with two shots. If any trap shooter, however, disagrees with Mr. Wakefield in the statement I would suggest that he would be better suited to stay at the gun to write about and not get up to Bar Harbor and try to show Mr. Wakefield and others how it is done. I have a hunch that Mr. Wakefield might make a better score by killing all the misses of other fellow.

DEER SEASON IN THE ADIRONDACKS POOR

SARATOGA, N. Y., Oct. 24.—Reports from the various counties and resorts for hunters are to the effect that the deer hunting season, which closes to-morrow in New York to-night, has been very poor throughout the lower Adirondack region. The severity of last Winter killed many deer, and the great increase in the number of hunters has driven the animals far back into the woods. Only about half the usual number of deer have been brought to this village.

BOWLING RETURNS IN THE AMERICAN

SECRETARIES of bowling leagues in Greater Boston are requested to send to the BOSTON AMERICAN complete schedules of their matches as soon as arranged, and the official scorers are asked to mail the standing of the clubs early each week. Proprietors of bowling alleys are invited to forward a list of the leagues using their alleys. Bowling news of the teams or individuals participating in the sport is welcomed at all times, and will be published.

Address Bowling Editor, The Boston American.

FLYNN TACKLES JIM BARRY HERE

Jim Barry, the conqueror of Sandy Ferguson, tackles Porky Flynn in the ninth bout at the Armory Club to-morrow night. Both think they're going to get away with the award. It looks like a fast bout, with Barry favored.

Barry has more experience than Flynn, although the latter has defeated the same men as Barry in quicker time. The question is whether Flynn will be able to stand off the heavy rushes of the visitor. Flynn has schooled himself against just such an attack. His recent defeat of Ted Sandwick, which have proved the undoing of several fast performances, are expected to be duplicated by Flynn to-morrow night.

Preliminary to the feature six fast boys will be three six-round preliminaries between well-matched lightweights. Bobby Gordon, who has been with Jack Howard of Lynn and A. J. Duffey of Boston, will clash for six rounds, while two heavyweights, Kenny Powell and Frankie Gunning, have Bob LeFavor of Brockton.

The circulation of the AMERICAN is 200,000 more than its next highest competitor and 75,000 more than all the other evening papers of Boston combined.

ISN'T IT TIME TO GET THAT FALL OVERCOAT? I THINK SO—

MELVIN WILLIAMS

I admit that the weather has been unusually mild for Fall—but Saturday night and Sunday night were cool enough for a top coat and you know it just as well as I do. You ought to have a neat, light-weight top coat in your wardrobe and you ought to let Gale & Kent of 96 Court Street build it for you.

The reason that you ought to get your overcoat from a tailor shop is just the same reason as I offer for getting your suits at a tailor shop. There is the same difference between tailor-made overcoats and ready-made overcoats as there is between suits. The style, the fit, the workmanship and the wear of a tailor-made garment of any kind are superior—different in every way—from the same features in ready-made clothes.

An overcoat made at Gale & Kent's the busy tailor shop at 96 Court Street, will cost just the same as a suit made there—$15 to $25. Everything about it will be guaranteed satisfactory or you can get your money back on your mere request.

Last Saturday saw the biggest day's business ever put onto Gale & Kent's books on a Fall day—and there were many overcoats among the orders.

Get over to 96 Court Street today or this evening and order your overcoat or a new suit.

TY COBB IS GUEST OF SOUTHERN FANS

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Oct. 24.—Tyrus Raymond Cobb, idol of baseball fans, was the guest of Charlotte yesterday. Mrs. Cobb and Baby Cobb accompanied the Detroit player, the party making the trip from Philadelphia by automobile. The visitors left later for Atlanta, their home city. The noted player was given a reception at the Highland Manufacturers Club during his stay.

BOSTON AMERICAN'S DOUBLE

The Problem of the Bad Boy

By DOROTHY DIX

In a certain fashionable apartment house in which all childhood has an inalienable right to be in a good boy. Put him in the country, where he would have space to grow and run, wholesome amusements, normal interests and the loving care of parents, and he would make a good man, possibly a great man, for Nature devised him on a great plan when she gave him the boy nature.

But now years this big, handsome, strong-limbed boy with silk from his shoulders and hands deft her. What will become of him then? What will be the child who is an exotic of the fashionable apartment house?

Why, he will be one of the rich hoodlums who are far too common, a boy that is like before ever yet he is bearded, a criminal without stimulus, mental, moral or physical; a prodigate on the wages of whom sins will be early death?

The Possible Curse

Oh, will he say, as he will have a right to say, to his parents:

"I am what you made me. I am the result of your selfishness. You never gave a home in which I might have grown to be a good man. Because of your hungers, you deprived me of a fit environment, and wisdom and advice and Because you enjoyed the excitement of dinners and parties and theaters, you shut me up in a miserable cage instead of giving me the open country. What I am I am because you failed in your duty as parents and the curse is on your head."

When one thinks about the mother and father of the Bad Boy, one wonders if they ever look into the future and think that, some day, their son may curse them for his blighted childhood and for having deprived him of his chance to become the man he was meant to be.

It is one of the great tragedies of New York life that there are so many boys like the poor, rich Bad Boy who have gone in from the making of splendid men, and who are being ruined by being brought up in the cagelated animals in little, cramped apartments in order that their criminally indifferent parents may not be forty-six minutes from Broadway.

Not long ago the Commissioner of Charities in Chicago made the significant statement that little rooms made bad boys and girls, that whether the little rooms are in West End tenement or up an apartment house in Commonwealth avenue or Lexington street.

Twisting a Soul

Although the Bad Boy lives in an apartment where rent costs many hundreds of dollars a year, and has servants to wait upon him, and fine clothes to wear, and gets riding every day in a splendid automobile, he is as pathetic a figure as any blundering, crippled civilization has produced. For he is a criminal in the making, a soul that is being dwarfed, shaded and twisted awry, just because it is not given the space and wholesome air in which to grow up into being the thing of beauty and use it was intended to be.

The Bad Boy's father and mother are separated, for what cause and with what reason, real or imaginary, Heaven knows. The boy lives with his mother, who either through a mad passion for amusement or else driven by an insatiable restlessness is forever on the wing.

Her automobile dashes up to the door only to dash away with her in it a few minutes later, and the boy is left, shut up within the narrow compass of his home, his own devices and the society of the servants. He is not even allowed to play on the streets, the foolish mother apparently considering that she has done her full duty in caring for him when she shuts him up alone.

The Boy's Cage

Can you wonder that the boy is a fool? Boy under such conditions? Is it strange that any strong, healthy boy whose every muscle aches aloud for action gets into mischief when he is shut up in a little box like a wild animal in a cage?

He is at an age when the body is more restless, and he has never eight in his rooms, cumbered with furniture, and tired with costly bric-a-brac that he must not break or injure, to wander through.

He is at the time of life when his mind is keenest, most curious, most interested about external things, and he has nothing to look at except across a dull street and down into the well of an apartment house court!

He is too young to read much, he can't play both as a girl would, and he is not such an old woman would, and he isn't one of the sissy. Percy sort of boys, who could be perfectly happy spanning things to a stamp album all day. He is a masculine, vigorous, virile, who needs the wide, open spaces to grow up in, and he is shut up like a canary in a gilded cage.

Isn't it tragic? Isn't it pathetic?

A Solution

The Bad Boy in the environment in which he is being reared is inevitably bound to grow up to be a bad man. He is savage, distrustful, mentally morbid, already seeking evil channels. His mind unhealthily occupied, is becoming perverted. Kept a prisoner, he avenges himself by doing all in his power to make life miserable for those about him. He is even now an Anarchist, a little lobster whose hand is against every other man.

And yet, the Bad Boy needs only that

Gold Dust
Makes Dish-washing easy

The use of a little GOLD DUST in your dish-water will make your dishes whiter, sweeter and cleaner than they ever can be without it. Unlike soap, GOLD DUST does more than clean the surface. It goes deep after germs and hidden food particles, and sterilizes everything it touches.

GOLD DUST does all the hard part of the work without your assistance, because it begins to dissolve and clean the moment it touches the water.

When you have to wash dishes 1095 times a year, the GOLD DUST method of saving half your time and half your labor means something.

GOLD DUST is sold in 5c and large size packages. The large package offers greater economy.

"D

ON'T talk to me of honor in love," she cried, furiously. "You have done this thing and you add scorn of contemptible pitiful cowardice to it. You have proved yourself degraded to the meanest and most savage present day. Well, let me tell you this. You have made me a murderess. I would have gone barefoot with the beggar of the world if you had asked me to. But you have chosen to be a coward. Well, I tell you what you have done this thing that you have done for me. You have killed my love. You have killed it with a stroke, all the tenderness and pity and passion of it. And I am glad, glad that I have done it. I am glad that I have killed it with a stroke, as a woman would, and not let it die a lingering death of torture. She put up her hands to her face and turned hurriedly to the door.

"Liane——" he said in true, pleading tones. "What a fool I have been—a fool to think that you could ever forget about her as she swayed. She made no pretense of love for me. She was the victim of his actions; he might have been enfeebling her mind for all I knew. She——"

"You do not need to ask me if it is true," she said, her voice a quiver with the emotion of your ears. You may believe the greatest actress that ever lived on the continent of Europe, but you know in the depths of your heart of a woman. Paul knows," she said. "Ask him. He knows. He is my friend——the man who trusted me——out of mire, out of vanity, out of——"

Liane you maddened me. You were always with him. You sang that song that you refused me, though you knew that your voice had the power to raise me to heaven. Liane, I could have forgiven anything but that. It was that that drove me mad."

"My Voice Is Gone."

The woman broke out into a laugh, a hopeless, half hysterical laugh.

"Sang to him, sang to him! Oh, you may as well know it in a few weeks' time," she said. "I shall never sing again. My voice is gone. That is what the Castignano told me. I saw the doctor last night. You won't mind starting at me stupidly. It doesn't you understand? My voice is gone!"

"But I don't understand," the man said with a bewildered air. "Your beautiful voice, Liane. You told me that it only wanted six weeks' rest. You told me"——

"Yes—lies! Do you think I didn't understand that it was because of my voice that Jardine was willing to make me a prima donna, and could hold the world spellbound about me? Oh, I understood you better than you understood yourself. I knew for what you loved me."

"Liane——" he protested, but she understood."

The woman's voice rose with passion. All the pent-up misery of years of suffering found her in its grip.

"You understood! You knew that I loved you for the crown of your head to the sole of your foot, for your faults—your furies——

His face was hurt to hers, her head was pressed against his shoulder. His arms were about her, a refuge secure and warm and tender, safe anchorage for all loss of heart, tempest tossed, all these weary years.

"Your voice—what does the loss of your voice matter to me, save in so much as it makes you sad? Did a man ever love a woman more? It you, the woman, Liane Deschanel, that I need," he whispered passionately.

But for a moment she rested there in the arms, then with a cry she broke away from him.

"Am I mad to forget"——you betrayed my friend! You entered the path of the former and a say——nothing can ever wipe that out——and you never forgive——

"Liane"——he made a step toward her. "What is the man to you?"

"Nothing, but he is an innocent man——a man who trusted me. A man I am proud to call my friend——and you have betrayed him! Do you understand what it means? How soon will the police be here? Do you realize that you have hounded a man to the gallows?"

The Russian looked at her. The passionate rage of her contemptuous words seemed to carry him out of himself.

"Liane, I——I——I will save him——let him yet——we can save him yet!"

"How? The police will be here in a few hours' time." Her eyes searched his face. "Before?"——she broke out quickly——"perhaps they are here now? I ought to have known you would have given him no time to escape."

"No—no, you are wrong!" the Russian exclaimed quickly. "Where is he, Liane? If I can get him over the frontier in my car——we have an hours start of the police[illegible] perhaps more. But there isn't a moment to lose!"

"Let him take treasure do you mean? Oh, it's insolence to even think of." They'd simply wire to have you stopped on the frontier. Besides now do I know that he would go with you? Have you ever shown yourself his friend?"

"I'll Save Him!"

But though she tempested already she was moving towards the house, the prince at her side. He talked to her eagerly as he went. There was more than a chance that he could get Jardine safely across the border. He would take him as his servant, luckily he had the man's passport with him.

"At least it will mean delay——and a possibility of escape," he told her coldly. "I will do my best to do all for him that your friend will get clean away——I'll save him, Liane, if it is possible, for a man to forgive me. But if you feel——you will be more guilty in my opinion than ever you appeared to yours. His blood will lie on your hands!"

"I'll save him." The Russian's tone was full of confidence. He stopped and touched her to him, there in the shelter of the great yew hedge. Their lips met. It was a kiss of——the seal of the covenant between them.

The car turned out of the gates of the park on the road winding down the side of the dusty road and Jardine, sitting on the box by Prince Paul Koloff's side, [illegible] it like a wooden thing, like the excited man he was about cars, but that they knew of a spot hardly to be reached, lying before it.

The clock over the stables struck an hour as the car passed them; the Russian glanced by the pale face beside him.

"You delayed treacherously, monsieur," he said under his breath, speaking in quite unconscious of the words.

The man had delayed, but not for long, as the time of waiting had seemed to the impatient Russian purring up and down the unpetrified hall, while his ugly, powerful car quivered at the foot of the long flight of shallow, worn steps. He had been in fear that some hitch had occurred in their plans; what if the man had refused to go? Until that moment such a possibility had not even entered his mind; but him, Richard Jardine had all along been nothing more than a pawn in the game of life, to be set aside at will——he was that still——but commanding a more valuable position now.

Then Liane Deschanel had appeared and Jardine with her, and he had seen from the look on her face that the supremacy of the man with her was a triumph hardly won. Now, he did not ask all at once, a new-born trust in the women he loved had sprung up tremendously in his heart. For the moment it was enough for him that they were clear of the gates of the park, with the coffee on the white stretch of the road before them.

The road was perfect; the powerful racing car that had broken innumerable records took it perfectly, to Jardine the trees seem to flit past like a solid wall, the hedges fields, spreading fan-like to the horizon, to spin and whirl. He knew little about cars, but the speed seemed to him terrific; the whir and the grind to drown all sound save that of their own going; there was a curious exhilaration in this rush through the air with the wind whipping past them. He felt an uncontrollable excitement just beginning to master him.

Feared Persuit.

But though no sounds were discernible to his ears, he noticed that from time to time the Russian looked back as though he feared pursuit.

The starvation, of the car had increased tremendously. Jardine found it hard to keep his seat. Glancing at the Russian he saw his face grim and set, his body hunched over the steering wheel.

"This is the frenzy of speed with a vengeance," he cried and almost in theory he wondered he remark the Russian grew him a brave command.

He obeyed. The white, shining stretch of road behind them grew high, swiftly moving blotch, veiled by the dust of its going, came through the dry air short and sharp.

"We are followed!" Jardine exclaimed, as the car swept by. "How long over your farewell, monsieur," the Russian answered.

Jardine felt his face reddon. Only he and the woman who had persuaded him to go knew what it had cost him to accept his uncle's offer, and make that last journey across the frontier. That he known by what means the police had obtained information he would have arrested the Russian with his own hands. Having accepted this act of [illegible] repentance.

There was as though he was ashamed of his weakness, the Russian jerked out:

"We are followed, yes, but failing an untoward accident to us there is no car in France that can gain on us now, monsieur."

Jardine looked behind. It was difficult to judge distances, owing as they were to the motion, yet he could have sworn that the racing car kept the same relative distance between themselves and that every mile was leaving on the white road had lessened; that the blot itself had increased in size.

He said nothing, but he watched the Russian's face, and there came into [illegible] another swift, backward glance Jardine knew from the quick, shifted look of anger that swept across it that his suspicions were verified. He could hear no sound none from those tightened lips, but he knew that the man was swearing heartily between them. Then the [illegible] slue's foot went out against a lever and the great car leapt with the sudden increase of its impetus.

Jardine, looking back, saw the pursuing blot lessen definitely in the distance. The Russian, bending over the steering wheel, shot a glance at him, and reading [illegible] what he wished to read, his face laughed aloud.

"There is not a car in France that could beat him; he was confident of that. He had raced some of the finest racing cars in Europe and America, and its record was unbeaten. Even in this France, let alone some poor, old wheezy police motor, that could touch the pace with ease. And he knew there would be no accidents. His lucky star was in the ascendant, and he could feel it rising in the morning star, shining and mounting in a glorious eye.

The ribbon of the road had wound itself past fields and trees, now they were entering the outskirts of a village that was almost a little town, where the gossiping women stopped to stare after the flying car. Jardine was [illegible] apparition of the devil, or shrieked shrill warnings to the children playing about the roadway.

Not possible to do so quickly through this place of teeming life, yet for all that it was left behind like a dusk; swerving round a bend of the road on to the plain way, the car careening like a chip at a perilous angle.

And now before them a long, ascending stretch of road, curiously English in appearance, with a few swaying poplars bringing the distance, and the tall poles of the telegraph straight and regular as the stems to a pine forest; they seemed to [illegible] and melt into each other as the car fled past them.

As they went, on the horizon Jardine saw the tiny silhouette of a horse and cart, growing momentarily nearer as the car kept on.

The Russian sounded his horn.

The jogging vehicle in front did not swerve an inch from the centre of the road is occupied so confidently, though he continued to give furious warning. Glancing at his face, Jardine remembered the nickname the world had given in detestation to this man, and wondered was he going to run the [illegible] looking hooded cart down? Just such a cart as Jardine had seen crawling along the [illegible] lanes a hundred times [illegible] and

The Duchess of Louisburg Square

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

THE Duchess of Louisburg square swept regally down the steps and into her waiting carriage.

Her attire was somewhat peculiar, but the Duchess of Louisburg square was a very democratic duchess.

Her coronet—oh, yes, the Duchess wore a coronet—consisted of a rumpled red bow which branches wildly in all directions.

Her gown, over which she constantly stumbled, lay about her in the folds which only a red shawl can royally assume.

On one royal foot was a high buttoned shoe that had once been white, on the other a tan slipper.

In her hand the Duchess carried a black umbrella, composed mostly of ribs.

But, as I said, the Duchess swept regally down to her waiting carriage. Two dashing, prancing steeds drew the royal equipage.

The Duchess Commands

The Duchess seated herself, raised her umbrella with languid grace, and briskly gave the order, "Get up."

The champing steeds pranced madly and then, alas and alas for the Duchess of Louisburg Square!

The blindwheels flew off the carriage and the Duchess turned a back somersault, and the prancing steeds, unconscious of the plight of their royal passenger, dashed down the street.

From the depths of the overturned carriage, which was marked "12 grass snow white laundry soap," there arose an indignant wail. The Duchess's two fat little legs kicked madly in the air and the ribs of the dilapidated umbrella stuck out in wild protest.

A sympathetic onlooker rescued the Duchess. Wiped her grimy baby face, and sent her on her way rejoicing with a nickel clasped in her tiny fist. And then the writer went on her way and mused on the characteristics of her own sex.

"Dear little baby girl," she thought, "growing up in your sordid surroundings, with your inborn love of luxury and pretty things, what will become of you?"

That tiny girl will be pretty—her own mirror and the dangerous mirror in men's eyes will tell her of her beauty.

And she will soon learn that pretty clothes will enhance her beauty. She will love color and gaiety and the feeling of excitement.

If she departs one inch from the conventional, beaten track, the world will push her down and keep her down and the men who tempted her will be the ones who will have least pity for her.

There is everything to tempt a girl in this day of luxury.

The shop windows, the beautifully dressed women driving by in their luxurious motor cars, the theatres and restaurants—all these are temptations to a girl.

Welcome Young Men

The thing that removes her from temptation is to fall in love with an honest, earnest young man of her own walk in life.

Mothers should bear this in mind and give their girls every chance to marry.

There is no necessity of forcing the situation, but make the men pleasant and eligible young men welcome.

Don't allow your daughters to be courted on the street corners. Give them a parlor in which to receive their friends.

Don't make your girls afraid to confide in you and remember that all girls are guilty of foolish actions now and then.

Remember that, "As the twig is bent, so the tree grows." And see that the twig is kept straight and wholesome.

All children are imitators. Little girls imitate their grown up sisters.

The Duchess, with her absurd red bow, her trailing shawl and her carriage, was imitating the women she saw driving by. She was playing "grown-ups."

Men and women whose sheltered lives have brought them no temptation may be hard on the erring ones, but I think that the recording angel, as he writes down their good and bad deeds, will say to himself, "Poor thing, she was but a woman born with a woman's love of pretty things and not strong enough to fight the long."

Desserts.

BAKED SUET PUDDING.

BOIL a pint of milk; when cold stir it into eight ounces flour and six of sliced ded suet; add two eggs and a teaspoonful of salt. If to be plum pudding, put in eight or ten ounces of seeded raisins and omit the salt.

PLUM PUDDING.

BEAT together thoroughly one-half cupful of butter, one cupful of sugar, one or two sugar and two eggs; add one-half cupful of sour milk and one-half cupful of molasses; to this mixture add two cupfuls of flour, either currants or raisins, equally divided, with a few strips of candied orange peel or citron, or currants alone, whichever is preferred; one-half teaspoonful each of ground cinnamon, cloves, allspice and nutmeg; one teaspoonful of soda. Dissolve in a little water, flour enough to make rather a stiff batter, and the last cupfuls of flour to be called cake batter. Butter a pudding mold or tin pail can. Pour the mixture in and steam four hours. This pudding will keep for a fortnight, and it is excellent when warmed over.

Cream sauce for pudding: Beat to a creamy cream one fourth cupful of white sugar and one-half cupful of fresh butter. Add it to a pint of sweet cream, dilutes to beat the sugar and butter to the desired foamy stage. Stir in one well-beaten egg and flavor to taste. Just before serving boil the mixture three minutes and add, of hot water, stirring rapidly to prevent its curdling.

DEVIL'S FOOD.

MELT over a fire a cupful of grated chocolate, one cupful of brown sugar and one cupful of sweet milk; cool and add the yolk of one egg, well beaten, and set aside. Cream one cupful of brown sugar and one-half cupful of butter, add one-half cupful of sweet milk and the yolks of two eggs well beaten, one cup flour, and fold in the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs. Last, add one teaspoonful of soda dissolved in a little warm water. Bake in three layers with the following icing: Melt over kettle five cents' worth of marshmallows, but until it throbs, one cupful of sugar and one-half cupful of water with one-half teaspoonful of white vinegar. Beat the remaining white of egg stiff, pour slowly over it the syrup and stir in the marshmallows. Stir in a cool place until cool.

Desperate Desmond

CURSES!
DESMOND IS FOILED!
MY REVENGE WILL COME AND ROSAMOND SHALL BE MY POWER HA, HA, HA!
YOU WILL NOT BOTHER MY ROSAMOND AGAIN!
CURSES AGAIN! BUT IT'S A FAST BOAT I WILL WIN HA, HA!
SAVED! CLAUDE IS SAFE AT LAST!
DESMOND IS FINISHED! HE SHALL NOT CLAIM BE MINE! HA, HA, HA!

Sam, the sign painter, is out one bucket of paint, but Desperate Desmond is not worrying about that. He has troubles of his own. That hat cost $6, which is quite some wealth these days. Furthermore, Claude and Rosamond have escaped his clutches—curses on them.

Just you wait till Desmond hauls up some water from the river and washes the paint off! He'll show Claude Eclaire that it takes more than a coat of paint to put D. Desmond out of business. Please understand, dear reader, that we don't sympathize with Desmond. We're just telling you what he said.

In the meantime, however, Claude and Rosamond have escaped, and Claude is not taking any more chances. He's got the villain just where he wants him, and if this be the last scene in the last act we'd be dead sure that cowardly cur was going to get his just deserts. However, we shall see.

Hooray! The bridge is open! There'll be some splash when Desmond hits the water. But who cares? Do you? No! Do we? However, as we said before, we haven't got to the last act yet, and we can't keep the show going without a villain, so there you are.

Isn't that always the way? Just as you think you've got the villain dead to rights something happens. If you or we were falling off a cliff we'd keep right on falling until it was time for the coroner's inquest. But then, we are not villains in melodrama. Those guys have a cinch.

He stood on the bridge at midnight. Who did? Why, Desperate Desmond, of course. He must be waiting for somebody. Gentle reader, you guessed right the very first time. He's waiting for Claude and Rosamond, and here they come. Won't they be surprised when they see him? They will. See the next pictures.

THE DOUBLE CROSS

A Great American Mystery Story by Gilson Willets

Copyright, 1910, by G. W. Dillingham Company.

SYNOPSIS

JOHN ST. JOHN, returning to the United States from Spain, receives, while the ship is in mid-ocean, a mysterious Marconigram. After reading the message he leaves it in his stateroom and goes out. Coming back a few minutes later, he finds a woman reading the Marconigram by the light of the moon through the port hole. Though the light is very dim, St. John believes he recognizes her as a beautiful girl whom he had often seen, but never spoken to, five years previously in the City of Mexico.

During the remainder of the voyage he is unable to find the mysterious lady, and the stewards refuse to give him any information on his arrival in New York, one of the stewards points out a lady as the one he seeks, but St. John is surprised to find that she is a blonde, while he is sure the woman who read his Marconigram was a decided brunette.

Going to the City of Mexico, according to the instructions given in the message, St. John is ushered to his father's old apartments in the Hotel Jardin.

CHAPTER III.

The Condition in the Will.

I REACHED the Mexican capital one week after my landing in New York.

At the Hotel Jardin, which was built around a large and beautiful Spanish garden—whence the hostelry derived its name—the proprietor himself greeted me obsequiously and conducted me at once up a flight of stone steps to the upper gallery, then along this and into a suite of rooms consisting of parlor, bedroom and bath—an apartment that was most luxuriously furnished and familiar to me in every detail.

"What!" I exclaimed, "these were my father's own rooms. He furnished them himself. Everything is seemingly just as he left it."

"Sí, señor," the manager assented. "The bill is submitted twice a year, and paid, just as during your father's lifetime."

"To whom is that bill sent?"

"To the Señor Reyes."

"What! The Minister of Justice—in the President's Cabinet?"

"Sí, señor. We transact our business with him, however, in his private capacity as licenciado (lawyer). He represents the trustee of your father's estate."

"Who is the trustee?"

"No one knows, señor. Your father's estate is administered as mysteriously as was your father's business whereever he lived in this hotel."

"Mysteriously?"

"I mean, señor, that your father occupied these rooms only when you, his son, happened to be in Mexico—never at any other time."

Romero.

"Where did my father live, then, when I was not in Mexico?"

"Your father's servant will be here presently, señor," the proprietor answered, "and he will probably enlighten you on some of your father's eccentricities."

"And the Señor Reyes," I said, "the representative of my unknown trustee—he, too, is coming here to-day?"

"Within the hour, señor. Señor Reyes, by the way, has recently become very famous in his peculiar specialty in law."

"What is it?"

"Breaking wills."

"Hum," I cleared my throat, molstened my lips. "So some one wishes to break a will?"

Entered just then a young Mexican of the upper servant class, a bright, intelligent-looking fellow, pleasing of face and gentle in manner.

"I learn you is good hands, señor," the proprietor said, bowing himself out. "I suppose he means your hands, boy-bred," I said.

"I was your father's servant, senor, I am now yours."

"I remember you. Your name always made me think of a Shakespearean romance. It is—Romeo!"

"Romero, señor."

And as Romero unpacked my trunk and bags, he said: "I have waited for you, senor, a year, with wages paid and nothing to do. I am glad you have come."

He began shaving me.

"Where did you wait—all the year," I asked.

"At the mansion of—pardon me senor, I will draw your bath. Your father was ever proud of this marble tub."

"Romero," I said, thoughtfully, "perhaps more money has been lavished in fitting up these rooms than in any other more hotel rooms in all Mexico. And yet, even these richly furnished quarters seem very modest, even humble—for a man of my father's wealth."

Two Visiting Cards

"Sí, señor. The Señor John St. John, your father, was richer than rich. The people here have a saying—that he could have built a mansion of silver from his silver mines up at Guanajuato; and could have furnished it with furniture of gold from his gold mines that lie between Guanajuato and La Luz."

"But then, Romero, why did he live in this modest way?—in these rooms? Was it—part of his hotel economies?"

"Perhaps, senor. But he did not live in these quarters all the time."

"At the mansion of—pardon, senor, you will know some day."

I recalled then what the proprietor of the hotel had said about my father ever occupying these rooms only when I, his son, happened to be in Mexico, and at no other time.

I looked around the bedroom while I dressed, noting each particular familiar object. On the centre-table lay a card-tray of exquisitely wrought gold. It was such a marvelously fine specimen of the goldsmith's art that I had particularly admired it on each of my previous visits to Mexico.

"This tray belongs in the parlor, Romero," I said. "Why is it here?"

"Probably the maids, when cleaning the rooms, senor, left it here by mistake."

In the tray now lay only two cards, the one bearing the name:

"Leon Alvarado."

And the other:

"Alva Alvarado."

"Who are these people?" I asked Romero, indicating the two cards. "Were they the last to call on my father here—before he left for the States and—his death?"

"Sí, senor. The very last callers!"

"Well? Who is—Leon Alvarado?"

"He was one of the greatest men in Mexico, senor—and perhaps the most beloved man in the Republic."

"Was?" I exclaimed. "He is dead?"

"Sí, senor, dead."

"And Alva Alvarado? Who was she? His daughter?"

"No, senor. His ward."

"Living?"

"Living, senor. Alvarado left her so rich that they have a saying here—that she can buy a new motor-car every day of her life, should she wish to. But she gives her money, senor, mostly to the poor."

"And those people were close friends of my father's?"

"Sí, senor. Leon Alvarado was your father's best friend."

"Are his ward, the Senorita Alva—is she senorita?—I mean unmarried?"

"Sí, senor. Unmarried. They have a saying here, however, that she is some day going to be married."

"Ah! So Leon Alvarado left a son, did he? And the Senorita Alva is in love with him?"

"It is said, senor, that she loves him like a sister. I do not know what else. She loves him—that is all."

"When are they to be married?"

"None know, senor. She rarely sees him."

"They seldom meet? Why? Where is he now? Is he not in the city?"

"Pardon, senor, I know nothing more."

"The sponge of information, Romero, is squeezed dry—is that it?"

I laid the two cards back on the exquisite gold tray, with the card of the Senorita Alva Alvarado uppermost.

A little later, while Romero brushed my back suit (for though my father had been dead something over a year, he had not yet discarded the sombre raiment of a period of mourning) I said:

The Father's Letter.

"You're a jewel, Romero—of secrecy! What's all this mystery for, anyway?"

"You are really now, senor, for—the Senor Reyes," and he gave me a final flick with his brush.

"The Minister of Justice?—and breaker of wills? Where is he?"

"In the patio, senor."

I entered the parlor and found a distinguished looking man, all distinctly Mexican, gray over the ears, sitting at my father's desk—or I suppose I should say my desk.

"Señor Reyes," he said, rising and pronouncing this his own name, after the custom of the country. "I represent the trustee of your father's estate."

The Minister of Justice was more than brisk in his manner. He was brusque. And I marvelled at finding this in the land of manana. After the briefest exchange of compliments, he at once plunged into business, saying:

"Your father died in your arms in New York a little over a year ago. He left you a certain letter in which he referred to conditions regarding his fortune. Have you that letter?"

I got the letter from the bedroom and gave it to my visitor.

"I will read this," he said, "in order that we may proceed with understanding."

"Mr. Son," the Minister of Justice began reading. "I have just made my will. You are now at the beginning of your twenty-fifth year. Will you grant your father's last wish? It is that you travel about for a year and then, upon entering your twenty-sixth year, return to the States—and you will at once receive notice as to where you are to report and what to do in order to receive the fortune I leave you. Though this may seem peculiar to you, even eccentric, believe, my dear boy, that I do it for your happiness. Farewell."

The Will

Having read this letter, the Senor Reyes put it in his pocket. From that same pocket he produced two other documents, one of which he opened, saying:

"Your father's will."

I read that will—delighted with the nature of its contents—for to me was a sonchfight focussed upon the woman of the moment.

Divested of legal phraseology, the provisions of the will were these:

First: That until I complied with the condition named, I would not receive my father's estate, but would be paid only an annual allowance of the same sum as illness, or the years since coming of age.

Second: The condition was that I should marry the woman who would appear to me bearing the "sign of the cross on her right arm just below the shoulder."

Third: That at the time of reading the will I must sign a marriage contract with "said woman of the cross," the said contract then to be entered in the public records.

Fourth: The said "sign" (being settled and thrown into relief by the dazzling whiteness of skin was described as a double cross, a drawing of which was given my father having himself made the drawing in scarlet ink, those on the moment I finished reading this remarkable document, Reyes suggested, sig nificantly

An Offer Refused

"It can be broken."

"I don't wish to break it," I blurted. "To contest this will would be to fight—the loveliest woman in the world."

Reyes seemed astounded.

"Then you are heart-free," he said. "We thought you might wish to govern your sweet affairs in your own way, and so were prepared to break——"

"No, no!" I cried, eagerly. "I've given my heart to the lady bearing the sign of the cross——"

"You have already received the sign of the cross?" Reyes sprang to his feet. "No, senor! Not I, here, not the girl of the cross, just the same."

The Minister of Justice smiled indulgently.

"Incredible," he said, resuming his seat. "Had you met her you would not be here in this hotel. You would be at the mansion of—never mind."

"Who is she, Señor Reyes," I said, "has she not recently returned from Spain? And did she not attend the Convent School here five years ago?"

"I can tell you nothing, senor, except that—she is the woman trained to be your mate."

"Trained to be my mate?" I repeated, wonderingly.

"Yes. She has the perfect mind and the perfect body."

"Perfect mind and the perfect body? What, exactly, does that mean? And—by the way, senor, she has black hair, of course?"

"Sí, senor, black as that of any senorita of Mexico. Your father met this girl ten years ago. She is now twenty-one. He trained her to become the ideal wife for you, his son—devoting himself to the task with the zeal of a fanatic. You, it was your father's mania that you should marry this girl, and only her. He often said that he would rather your death than your marriage to any other woman."

Instructions.

"But supposing something should go wrong?" I said. "Supposing the woman I have in mind should prove to be—not the woman of the cross? I swear I will marry no woman but the one I have in mind. What if she should not be the woman of the cross? I would then forfeit my fortune. Is that it?"

"But you will marry the lady of the cross," Reyes insisted, confidently.

"The girl herself has her instructions, I presume?"

"Certainly, senor. She is not one to shirk her duty—even should she love some man other than yourself. All that I can tell you further is that the cross on her arm is blood-red and appears to be a birthmark—though it might be a brand, a cauterization, a scar from a burn."

"But then with the sight of the cross?"

"Not later than the time when you are in most danger of marrying the wrong woman—she will appear to you voluntarily and deliberately show you the cross on a most exquisite arm just below a most beautiful shoulder."

"Yes, I know," I asserted, thinking of the three shoulder straps that had been unhooked only to be rehooked.

"Then you will marry her?" Reyes went on to hurry this woman in any way in the case you should discover her identity before she shows you the cross? A girl refused as she has been has a wide revenge. She could—and probably will—do her own way—and she is original, unconventional, even daring in her methods. Just when she will appear to you, and just what methods she will use to bring you to a knowledge of the cross, depends entirely upon her own wishes in the matter. Or one thing I am certain, however much unrest she finds herself obliged to show you the cross for some reason best known to herself, she will wait till she makes sure that you love her. She will test your love to the utmost."

"How can she do that?" I protested, "if I do not meet her? But, no matter, if she is the woman I have in mind, she has already divined that I love her."

As I said this, I heard a sound, ever so slight, behind me. I looked around quickly, startlingly. Romero stood by the bedroom door.

"Did you just come in, Romero?" I asked.

"Sí, senor."

"You are nervous, senor, yes?" Reyes said, smiling.

"I thought," I replied, "I heard the swish of a woman's skirt."

Boston Society in Quaker City

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

Among the important weddings of the Autumn of much social interest in Boston will be that on November 29, in Philadelphia of Miss Julia Rush Biddle, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Alexander Williams Biddle, and T. Charlton Henry, which will take place in St. Mark's church. Boston will be represented among the attendents by Mrs. Charles Minot, Jr., (Mary Astor Paul) who with her husband is occupying the lavish house on Beacon street, and Miss Mary Josephine Amory, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis I. Amory of Commonwealth avenue.

Mrs. John B. Silsbee who has been spending the Summer in Beverly has returned to her town house on Marlboro street for the Winter.

Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Wheelwright who have been occupying Mrs. Samuel Foster's cottage at Beverly Farms the past Summer, have closed it on Saturday and came up to their town house on Beacon street.

John W. Cutler of Brookline whose wedding to Miss Rosalind Fish of New York took place a week ago is bringing his bride to Beverly Farms for the season where they will occupy the George Lee Cabot cottage. Hale street with the Bernard C. Weids of Marlboro street occupied the past season.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Wilder Pollard of Brookline and East Gloucester are to pass most their daughter, Miss Elise Pollard a large tea which they are to give at the Tuileries on November 22.

The Francis R. Allens concluded their stay at "Old Corner House," West Manchester on Tuesday and returned to their town house on Fairfield street for the Winter.

Mrs. Joshua Bennett Holden and her daughters, Miss Anna Holden and Miss Gwendelyn Holden have concluded their stay at Concord and are at the New Weston on Madison avenue, New York, for an indefinite stay.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Porter, Jr., who have been at their Summer place in Manchester since their recent return from abroad are now at their town house on Marlboro street.

Mrs. William Story Bullard and the Misses Ellen and Katherine Bullard have brought their stay at the Saltonstall cottage in Readville to a close and are again at their town house on Commonwealth avenue.

Mrs. Robert E. Evans who has been in Stockbridge for the early Autumn will return to her Summer place at Beverly in November for a short stay prior to opening her town house in Gloucester street.

The Joseph L. Prothingams, formerly of Chestnut street, are to occupy the house, No. 291 Marlboro street the coming season.

Among recent Boston arrivals in Europe are Mr. and Mrs. Arthur E. Grannis with their young son, A. E. Grannis, Jr., and the Misses Amy, Margaret and Eleanora Grannis. Mr. and Mrs. Grannis visited the latter's mother and sister, Mrs. Oscar Issigl at their Stockbridge villa several weeks before sailing. The Grannis country house is "Rockledge Farm" at New Canaan, Ct. As Mrs. Issigl and her daughter Nora have started on a trip around the world it is quite likely they will all meet and spend some time together.

James L. Wesson of Newbury Street and Miss Isabel Wesson have returned from their Summer home, "Fairview" at Sandwich and are at their town house on Newbury street.

The John E. Thayers are planning to return to town from their Lancaster estate on Tuesday. They are to occupy the Charles F. Mason house on Exeter street this Winter.

Mrs. George H. Little, formerly of Brookline is spending the Winter at the Parisii.

Miss Martha Codman who returned recently from her Summer abroad and has since been at Newport superviving the building of her [illegible] new home there will, a little later go to Washington for the Winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Channing of Brookline and their two daughters, Miss Rosalie and Miss Barbara, are among the recent arrivals from abroad. Mrs. Channing and her daughters sailed early in the Spring and were joined by Dr. Channing in the Summer.

BOY WHO TRIED DEATH HUNTED BY BAD SPIRIT

Seventeen-year-old Adolph Talamini, who tried to strangle himself with a towel in a hotel at Portland, Me., because the girl he loved didn't return his affection, was led away from his East Boston home through an overpowering ambition to be a star in moving picture homes, according to the statement his mother made to-day at her home, No. 196 Bremen street, East Boston.

Mrs. Talamini had not heard of her son's attempt to commit suicide until a reporter told her the facts to-day. In a news dispatch from Portland it was stated that the young man registered at the Falmouth House as Jack Alter and in his room drew sketches of pistols and razors and wrote:

Uses Towel as Noose.

Later he tried to strangle himself with a towel. In a note he left he said he wanted to die because he "loved Ethel" and had found she did not love him.

"A very devil followed my step Adolph around," said his mother. "He was obsessed by a bad spirit. He wanted to be a singer and composer, and I think that this ambition ruined him. Trying to sing at moving picture theaters proved his downfall.

"I know of no sweetheart he had. Ethel is a name unknown to me, but I think it must be the name of one of those moving picture girls in the theatres.

"Adolph had a job in Boston as a printer. He left home a week ago to-day. On Tuesday I received a letter, where my husband is the publisher of Liberta, an Italian weekly paper. That night when I returned I found a special delivery letter in some fake name from Adolph. He wanted money. I had none then, and told not send any.

News Shocks Mother.

"I have four children to take care of here. I intended, however, to send him some to-day, believing he was stranded and wanted to come home.

"I am surprised to hear of this act. This is the first I have heard of it. The name Adolph used in registering himself as Jack Alter is my maiden name—Alter. Adolph was born at The Maine General Hospital, where the physicians gave it as their opinion that the youth would recover.

MRS. VANDERBILT TO DINE "ALL COMERS"

NEWPORT, R. I., Oct. 31.—Thanksgiving will be observed here, for many are remaining at their summer homes until after that time. Several house parties are being planned. Mrs. Frederick W. Vanderbilt will give her annual Thanksgiving dinner to all comers, afterwards a box of cushions for all the newspaper and telegraph boys and "all comers" of the male sex under twenty years of age.

WEAK WOMEN

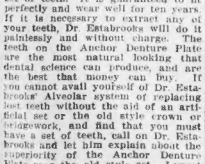
Nine-tenths of all the sickness of women is due to some derangement or disease of the organs distinctly feminine. Such sickness can be cured—is cured every day by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It makes weak women strong, sick women well. It acts directly on the organs affected, and is at the same time a general restorative tonic for the whole system. It cures female complaint right in the privacy of home.

Every man or woman needs the People's Common Sense Medical Adviser. Full of information on the questions and problems which confront young or old—single or married persons. It's the best doctor to have in the house in case of emergency. Enclose 21 one-cent stamps to Dr. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

IF YOU MUST HAVE A SET OF TEETH

Be sure to get the Anchor Denture Plate, the latest and best.

Unlike the ordinary set of teeth, Dr. Estabrooks' Anchor Denture Plate is roofless. This construction allows you to talk and taste perfectly. It is cool, comfortable, clean and fits better. It never drops, shifts or displaces, to cause wearer embarrassment.



Dr. Estabrooks has made the special low popular price of $5 on this set of teeth. It is guaranteed to fit perfectly and wear well for ten years. If it is necessary to extract any of your teeth, Dr. Estabrooks will do it painlessly and without charge. The teeth on the Anchor Denture Plate are the most natural looking that dental science can produce, and are the best that money can buy. If you cannot avail yourself of Dr. Estabrooks' Alveolar system of replacing lost teeth without the aid of an artificial set or the old style crown or bridgework, and find that you must have a set of teeth, call on Dr. Estabrooks and let him explain about the superiority of the Anchor Denture Plate over the old style set. Lowest prices in Boston on crown and bridgework and on gold or other fillings.

MISS GARDEN TELLS HOW SHE WEARS NEW BIFURCATED HOBBLE

CHICAGO, Oct. 31.—That Miss Mary Garden has an extremely new bifurcated skirt she confided the fact to an interviewer here. Then she brought out the garment.

"Is it not wonderful?" she asked. "You see I put one foot through here and another through here, and thus I am enabled to walk a free step and still retain the hobble effect."

JEFF BOOSTS THE MUTT BOOK

For the love of Mike, Mutt it's care reasonable to give away those books about us on the Boston American's tenus," was the way Jeff put it, when he recalled that it took but seventy cents and twenty-five cents to get one of the original Mutt and Jeff books of cartoons, drawn by the inimitable "Bud" Fisher. The books of drawings are going fast, so you had better get yours now. It's the only way in which you can get a copy of the book-save higher priced copies from executive issues of the BOSTON AMERICAN and pressed thirty-five cents at the Premium Department or in any newsboy who sells the AMERICAN. Then you get the book.

Every page is funny. The cartoons reproduced were selected by Fisher himself out of his entire series of Mutt and Jeff drawings. All American presidential have copies of the book. Better get one now.

ARCHBISHOP OPENS EAST BOSTON CHURCH

In the presence of a large congregation, the Church of the Star of the Sea, corner of Saratoga and Moore streets, East Boston, was dedicated by Archbishop O'Connell, assisted by the Rev. William H. Mellon, pastor of the church, and the Rev. Daniel Ryan of St. Cecelia's. Rock Roy. The services started with the laying of the corner stone by the archbishop, after which the sermon was preached by the Rev. Joseph F. Tracy, pastor of St. Columbkill's Church, Brighton. The services were concluded by the benediction of the blessed sacrament by the Rev. Lawrence P. McCarthy of the church of the Holy Redeemer, East Boston. The priests connected with the new edifice are the Rev. William H. McDonough, the Rev. John Kelly and the Rev. Robert Bolling.

"BUTT-IN" BURGLAR IS HELD FOR TRIAL

Walter H. Bishop, nineteen years old, of Chelsea, pleaded guilty to-day in the Dedham District Court on three complaints of breaking and entering and was held for the Superior Court in $5,000 bonds. Bishop came to grief in his operations by running almost into the arms of one of the men he had robbed, Daniel Smith of Oak Bluffs, Dedham. Bishop entered an elevated train each at Forest Hills with wearing a coat belonging to Smith's home in Dedham and was immediately recognized. Also he was immediately arrested.

FIREMEN NEAR TO DEATH IN CRASH

Members of ladder No. 4, Dudley street Roxbury, had a narrow escape from serious injury when the truck turned into an elevated pile at the corner of Dudley and Warren street, the apparatus responding to alarm. Two of the horses were thrown to the street and the axle of the ladder truck was smashed into splinters. Due to the unexpected end of the ladder truck striking the pole probably saved it from being driven through the front windows of the drug store of L. D. Drew on the corner.

SMOKES IN BED, MAY LOSE LIFE

SALEM, Oct. 31. An after dinner smoke may cost Joseph Savard his life, for he is in the Salem Hospital badly burned. Savard was lying on his bed, smoking a pipe. He fell asleep and the pipe dropped from his mouth and the bedding ignited. He was almost suffocated when firemen entered him.

CHARITY MUSICALE.

The Ladies' Catholic Club of Boston will hold a novelty and charity sale in the United Verdonne on Saturday, November 12. The musicale will be from 2 to 5 and the sale from 2 to 10 p. m. The patronesses are Mrs. James S. Fox, vice-president of the club, and Mrs. Daniel L. McLean, one of the directors. The proceeds will be for the settlement House, No. 1412 Washington street.

HICKORY VANISHING.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—Warning that the original supply of hickory, the best American tool wood and the most difficult to replace in case of a shortage of American hardwoods, is approaching exhaustion is given in a bulletin of the Department of Agriculture issued by Forest Assistant Anton C. Bosen and J. A. Newlin, engineer in timber tests.

'TARS' NEED NO SPECIAL GUARD, SAYS O'MEARA

Police Commissioner Stephen O'Meara has written an open letter to Mayor Fitzgerald in regard to the robbery of two of the crew of the U. S. battleship Rhode Island, and returned to the latter documents he received from the commandant of the Charlestown Navy Yard and forwarded to the head of the law enforcing department. The Police Commissioner declares the enemy from an official point of view and says in connection:

"This is not chiefly a matter for police consideration, but I may properly remark that as the Secretary of the Navy, who controls the movement of ships, has been a resident of Boston for practically his whole life, he is not likely to be alarmed by any extreme danger to life or property in our streets; and I feel sure that he would be horrified if he were told that the able-bodied young men who compose the enlisted forces of the navy required a greater degree of protection than the men, women and children can make up the enlisted population.

"Permit me to suggest that in writing to the commandant you inform him that matters requiring prompt police action can be attended to effectively only if reported at once to the nearest policeman or police station, that Police Station 1 is at a distance from the Navy Yard, and has a public telephone as well as private telephone connection with every police station of other stations, and that should he decline to accept the police service he therefore higher than the Captain of Police, and that the Chief of Police and the office of the Superintendent of the Commissioner to Penitentiary superintendent With which I am confident he will in any feel condition of the same cordial cooperation on the part of the police department which has existed heretofore to such a degree as to call forth no word of complaint on the part of his imperial predecessors."

DEMAND RIGHTS FOR TAMPA CIGAR MEN

President Taft, Governor Gilchrist of Florida and Major McKay of Tampa were petitioned to-day in formal resolutions adopted at the overflow mass meeting of trade unionists of Faneuil Hall under the auspices of the Boston Central Labor Union to protect the striking cigar makers of Tampa in their constitutional rights as citizens. Also the resolutions protest on the part of Boston against the trumped-up charge of conspiracy against the labor leaders and request action affectuate the resolutions demand the protection of the Tampa cigar workers from the attacks being made on them.

JANE ADDAMS HEADS PICKETS AT CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Oct. 31.—Chicago society women, headed by Jane Addams of Hull House, to-day started upon their self-imposed task of doing picket duty for the girl strikers in the garment workers' union. Scores of women, their ranks being augmented by co-eds from Chicago and Northwestern Universities, took up their stations to-day. While from picketing, the social workers plan more material assistance to the girls who are deprived of wages while out on strike. It was estimated that 30,000 workers had joined the strike, and that 2,000 more would be recruited from other shops to-day.

City Hall Notes

The Health Commissioners have been summoned before the Finance Commission to-day. They have been subpoenaed investigations of the Health Department. Chairman Grossman declared that the object of the commission is to get the opinion of the Health Commissioners on the question of abolishing the outdoor school for consumptives at Franklin Park.

Residents here on Friend street want that thoroughfare made a one-way street from Union to Endicott street. They will be given a hearing by the Street Commissioners.

Secretary Ernest Health Commissioner Ritchie's friends have been writing to Mayor Fitzgerald, urging the appointment of Ritchie to the vacancy on the Health Board. The proposition has not impressed the Mayor very strongly. He replies Ritchie with the present commissioner, Dr. Mahoney.

Candidates for the Police Department and fire fighting force will have the assistance of Daily Record, in the form of questions to attain a satisfactory physical examination. School Committeeman Magels, whose term expires on Tuesday and Principal Dorr, of the Boston Latin School, will be given to those who desire to take up this work.

There will be two new candidates for the School Committee at the next city election, School Committeeman Magels, whose term expires on Tuesday, and a number of friends that there is no constituency under which he could be running, to become a candidate for re-election. Dr. David B. Scannell feels the same way. There will be at least a score of candidates who are anxious to take their places.

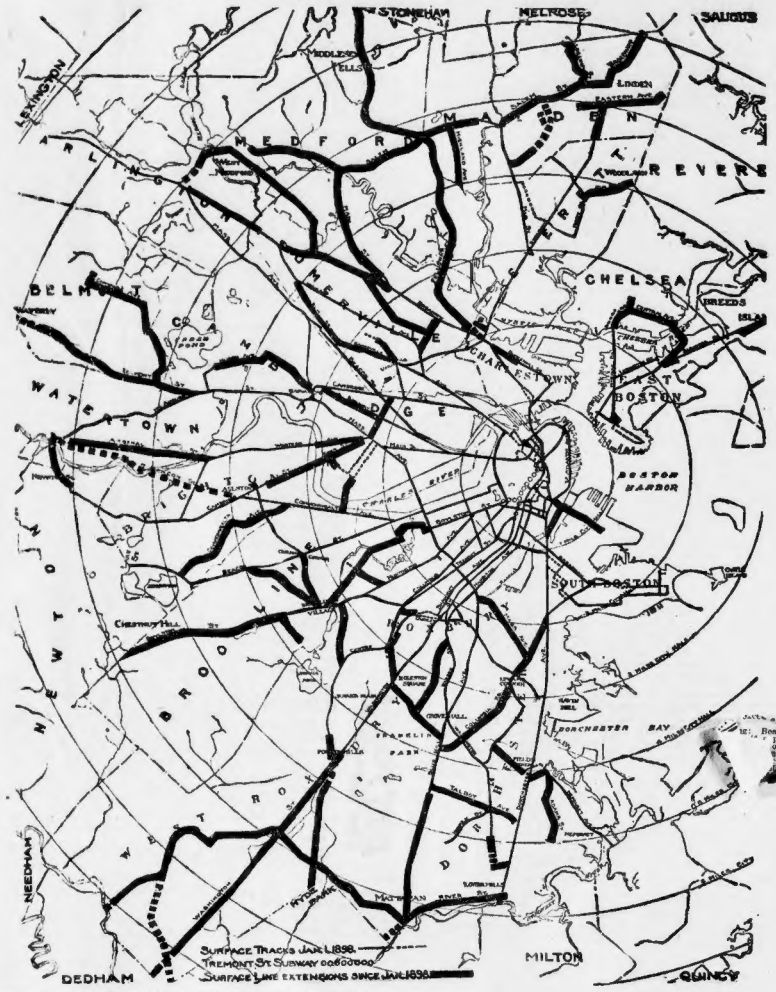
What the Boston Elevated Has Done for Rapid Transit

Extensions and Additions, Subway, Elevated and Surface, Which It Has Provided

MAP NO. 10 ADDITIONS TO SURFACE LINES



From map of Boston Suburbs, Copyright, Geo. H. Walker & Co., Walker Lith. & Pub. Co.

The Boston Elevated Railway Company is showing the additions and extensions which it has made to its system.

On September 28 was shown the surface lines and the Tremont Street Subway as in January, 1898. This was when the Boston Elevated took charge. On October 3 there was shown in addition the original Elevated system. On October 5 the East Boston Tunnel. On October 10 the Washington Street Tunnel. On October 12 the Forest Hills Elevated Extension. On October 17 the East Cambridge Elevated Extension. On October 19 the Cambridge Subway and Boston Hill Tunnel. On October 24 the Riverbank Subway. On October 26 the Malden Elevated Extension.

To the above is now added the

Addition to Surface Lines Shown thus ▬

Sixteen states in the Union and numerous important cities, such as Louisville, Indianapolis, Omaha, Rochester, Columbus, etc., have each LESS MILES OF STREET RAILWAY than the Boston Elevated has ADDED TO THE SURFACE LINES in the last twelve years.

When the West End Street Railway Company was leased in 1897 there were three hundred and four and a half miles of surface track—all that had been built in 41 years.

One hundred and fifty-six miles, or an INCREASE OF FIFTY PER CENT., have been added in 13 years.

These additions cost about TWELVE MILLIONS OF DOLLARS.

Substantially all of these additions have been built in the outer suburbs.

This means that the distance which a passenger may be carried for five cents has greatly increased.

Five cents today buys LESS than it formerly did of almost any commodity, but MUCH MORE of transportation on the Elevated system.

There were at the time of the lease TWENTY free transfer points. Now there are SEVENTY-NINE.

There WERE then 23,775,726 free transfer passengers. Now there ARE ABOUT 185,000,000.

The one hundred fifty-six miles increase is distributed as follows: Boston, Roxbury, 15.8; West Roxbury, 23.0; Brighton, 8.0; Charlestown, 5.2; Dorchester, 25.3; East Boston, 2.6; South Boston, 2.0; Arlington, 4.0; Belmont, 8.5; Brookline, 8.0; Cambridge, 5.0; Chelsea, 2.0; Everett, 1.0; Malden, 12.5; Medford, 15.5; Newton, .2; Somerville, 11.4; Watertown, 6.8.

To these extensions in large measure are due the health, comfort, and beauty to be found in the suburbs for which Boston is justly celebrated.

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

WEAK OPENING OF THE MARKET

Readjustment in business affairs is proceeding at a more or less rapid rate, but it is a unanimous opinion at the best and not without its disappointments.

$ $ $

The market may be somewhat erratic this week, but the confident expectation is that there will be an advance after the election in spite of the feeling of uneasiness in connection with the money situation. The percentage of loans to deposits is increasing, while the percentage of specie to loans shows a decrease.

$ $ $

Strong measures have been resorted to by the banks all over the country to bring about a reduction in the loan account, but the result has, in no way been gratifying. There must be a mass of fixed loans which cannot be converted, and it may be necessary to carry them for some time yet.

$ $ $

None of the more fearsome people in the street are anxious enough apprehended and have frightened themselves into the belief that we are to see 1907 over again. Their fear is not very well founded. From August, 1909, to August, 1910, practically speaking, the market went nowhere. It may be said that about half the losses have been recovered, but the losses through all the depression has been pretty well leaned. We are now at the top of the wave, as was the case in September, 1909.

$ $ $

Grain crops of the whole world are tending to increase greatly, for the high prices have inspired farmers to use modern machinery to such an extent as to counterbalance the loss of cattle, which is drawn from the farms by the factories. In a few years machinery may completely destroy equilibrium between the producers and the consumers of food. Another very notable transformation is going on may be seen in the remarkable prosperity of companies which furnish agricultural machinery.

$ $ $

An interesting development in the United States which has been going on for several years but is just now beginning to attract general attention, is the change in the Pacific Coast relations with the rest of the United States. The Pacific Coast has until recently depended entirely on the East for its manufactured articles, and its trade has been depending on the far West for its fruit. Consequently of all the California has furnished a cheap fuel, which will make the Pacific Coast independent of the East and cheap coal in the East has made the Atlantic Coast.

$ $ $

The situation so far as the Interborough-Metropolitan stocks are concerned is not as yet clearly defined and most of those who are buying these stocks are taking them on faith. The so-called bull movement is not giving out "information" to the effect that these securities will have a most tremendous rise in the near future.

$ $ $

It is not the intention of the insiders in Amalgamated to make any spectacular demonstration, but to advance it gradually. The understanding is that the Standard Oil people are in a position to do what they please with it because of the great improvement in the copper situation. Probably Goosly says the dividend on Amalgamated now 2 per cent. yearly, may be raised to 4 per cent.

$ $ $

A good deal is being said in regard to constructive legislation on the part of the Legislature and Congress after election, but it is not apprehended that it will do the Southern Pacific any special harm. The finding in the Minnesota Rate case case shows that States cannot go very far with any rewriting on the powers given to the Interstate Commerce Commission and this is not permissible.

$ $ $

In spite of the fact that there is no aggressive bull leadership in Union Pacific as was the case when Mr. Harriman was alive, it is one of the most substantial of markets and the bulls depend greatly upon its being thrown out by banking interests which might if so freely offered at say 20 points lower continue certain that it will sell materially higher before it goes much lower.

$ $ $

From the viewpoint of the commercial trader the outlook is altogether encouraging. Despite talk to the contrary, the railroads and iron companies are increasing their earnings daily and the October returns will show improvement. All this is attested to by railroads, especially in the West. The Atchison, if in its September statement shows a handsome increase in net earnings.

D. P. Sullivan, president of the operating companies of the Massachusetts Electric companies, has returned to Boston after a three weeks' vacation trip, in which he went through to the Pacific coast.

80 AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, OCTOBER 31, 1910.

The Duty of the Voters Is to Cast Their Ballots Against Draper and Lodge and Give the People a Chance to Govern Themselves

Governor Draper has made many speeches in this campaign. But so far he has not given ONE SUFFICIENT REASON why he should be re-elected.

The best argument that his friends seem able to make for him is that "he is a gentleman, a good fellow and always stands with his party."

That is a very poor reason for the wage-earners of Massachusetts, who are PAYING FIFTY PER CENT. MORE FOR THE NECESSARIES OF LIFE NOW THAN THEY DID A FEW YEARS AGO.

Governor Draper and Senator Lodge insist that the high cost of living is not due in any way to the Republican tariff. They airily dispose of the question by declaring that it is nation-wide and cannot be traced directly to any one particular source.

BUT THE WAGE-EARNER, who is now paying 25 per cent. more for bread, 35 per cent. more for butter, nearly 50 per cent. more for eggs, over 55 per cent. more for flour, 68 per cent. more for pork, with everything that he wears and everything that his family wears taxed 50 per cent. more than it was in 1900, finds little consolation in anything that Governor Draper or Senator Lodge may say.

Draper and Lodge are both very rich men—enormously rich. Whether the necessaries of life cost 50 per cent. more, or less, is to them of no importance whatever. But to the man in the street, the man who works in the shops, in the mills, in the stores and who has a family at home, it is a vastly different story.

IT IS SAFE TO SAY THAT IN THE STATE OF MASSACHUSETTS ALONE THE INCREASE IN THE PRICE OF LIVING IS FULLY $200,000,000 A YEAR MORE THAN IN 1900.

The men who are paying this enormous sum are the men who are going to cast their ballots for or against Draper on election day.

If they are willing to pay this prodigious amount for the pleasure of having Governor Draper represent them in the State House and Senator Lodge misrepresent them in Washington, that, of course, is their business alone.

BUT WE DO NOT BELIEVE that the voters are going to return [illegible] to the State House. And when they vote against Draper and Lodge it should be remembered that they are voting also against Lodge and the "INTERESTS" in Washington.

The election for United States Senator to succeed Lodge takes place at the forthcoming session of the Legislature. The way to defeat Lodge is to defeat the Republican legislators who will vote to re-elect him.

The crushing of Lodge, next to the defeat of Draper, is the thing most desired of all in Massachusetts politics just now. It would be a notice to the people of the United States that Massachusetts has broken away from the "INTERESTS" and will henceforth send to Washington men who will REPRESENT ALL THE PEOPLE, and not the small army of multi-millionaires who have fattened and grown rich on the votes of Lodge and men like him.

Little use is it for Governor Draper to say that there are wrongs in the State which, when re-elected, he will rectify. Only the other night he declared in one of his speeches that there are too many State Commissions.

Is it on record anywhere that Governor Draper has opposed the appointment of high-paid commissions—many of them useless—to do the work that properly elected State officials should do in the routine order of their daily work?

These commissions have added enormously to the cost of State government. Governor Draper's confession that government by commission is largely a failure comes too late to have any effect.

Promises of what he will do in the future are valueless, because his performance in the past has been negative.

A "gentleman" in the State House and a "scholar in politics" at Washington have not solved any of the problems of government for the man who earns his bread in the sweat of his face. IT IS TIME TO MAKE A CHANGE.

Under no possible circumstances could Foss do as poorly as Draper has. He ought to do a great deal better. He ought to use every endeavor to restore a government of the people, instead of by commission, and legislation by representatives of the people, instead of by the "INTERESTS."

The AMERICAN urges all its readers to vote against Draper and Lodge.

Keliher and Peters Should Not Be Returned to Congress

John A. Keliher, candidate for re-election to Congress in the Ninth District, and Andrew J. Peters, candidate for re-election in the Eleventh District, have not yet explained to their constituents why they BETRAYED THEIR PARTY and voted to keep Speaker Cannon in power at a time when that arch-enemy of the people had been repudiated by a large section of his own party.

It is time that Keliher and Peters began to talk about this important question. With twenty-one other Democrats, Keliher and Peters voted for the Fitzgerald amendment in the House of Representatives which kept Cannon in the place of director of national legislation.

Without these Democratic votes Cannon would have been shorn of his power for evil.

By voting for the Fitzgerald amendment both Keliher and Peters forfeited their right to be known as Democrats and their claims upon the Democratic party and upon the people of Massachusetts. They were disloyal public servants. They betrayed the greatest of trusts.

The voters in the Ninth Congressional District should overwhelmingly defeat Keliher and in the Eleventh District they should bury Peters good and all Andrew J. Peters.

VOTE AGAINST BOTH KELIHER AND PETERS AND MAKE THE FIGURES SO LARGE THAT THEY WILL NEVER AGAIN ASPIRE TO CONGRESSIONAL LIFE.

The Pork and Beans Campaign

By BILL ROSS

AROUND the stove they gathered in the village groceree
And talked of everything which lives upon the land or sea,
Until they came to politics and how they ought to vote,
A question always likely much discussion to promote.
Then Old Man Jones, the oracle of many a past campaign,
Said that the situation inspired in him much pain:—
"I've heard all kinds of issues since a ballot I fust cast,
But there's nothing like the ones on hand in annals of the past.
We used to talk of slavery and right of States to quit;
An' then corrupt officialdom made patriots chuck a fit.
But now the question which stands up and pokes us in the nose.
Is what we have to pay at stores for fodder and for clothes.
We hear no more of '76 and days of '61,
An' how we made the British flee and then the rebels run;
No more do the campaigners fire our hearts with battle scenes,
The only thing they talk about is price of Pork and Beans."

Wonders of Electricity

By B. W. HARBOLT

WHEN you venture among the huge generators and converters in electric plants at Niagara, along the streams of the Sierras, or in the Appalachians, you get a conception, vaguely, of the presence and potency of the infinite!

In no phase of America's dynamic progress has there been a swifter advance or one meaning more to our civilization than in the electrical field.

The mills of the gods at last are grinding fast.

At the Centennial Exposition in 1876 there were two electric light exhibits. The crowds that attended that modern fair returned to cities which in an incredibly short time were flooded at night with electric light, and which transcribed the wondering population in cars run by electric power.

The progress within the last five years has been more striking than in the preceding twenty-five. Conspicuous in this mighty change now transforming our civilization is the conversion of water power into electric light and energy. It is estimated by engineers, and the estimate has been checked up by competent authorities, that there are available in the waterfalls of this country 30,000,000 horsepower units of electric energy. Think of it! 30,000,000 h rses that will toil night and day without future forever for coming America.

That number of horsepower, which our streams can supply, is equivalent to an annual consumption of 6,000,000,000 tons of coal. Our present production of coal, which has alarmed many conservators, represents in power only a little more than half of the stupendous energy pumping down the rapids and cataracts of this country.

And a wonder of this incomparable supply of power and light for man's industry, comfort and luxury is that he can use it without ever exhausting the supply!

Should we at some time exhaust the coal deposits, and should the industries which consume that fuel multiply vastly more than their present superb volume, the watercourses of this country could readily lift the whole burden and continue to whirl all of the wheels in our continental prosperity and advance.

Recent successes in long distance transmission along copper wires of electric power read like chapters from the "Arabian Nights." The power lines radiating from Niagara are frequently described as the crowning career in man's successes in harnessing the visible to the unseen. It is true that the street cars in Syracuse, 165 miles away, and the lights in that city, are operated from the Falls of Niagara; but the greater part of that stupendous energy is used locally, and only 5 per cent. of the available power in the water is as yet utilized. Niagara's full measure of power which can be utilized industrially is equal to 5,000,000 horses. Niagara, in fact, will give life and light to a hundred or more cities in America.

One American transmission system showing the possibilities awaiting us in this electric age is in northern California, where the power is carried 232 miles from an electric station in the Sierras to communities on the coast.

In a heterogeneous spiderweb system of wires, with Los Angeles at the centre, more than 1,100 miles of transmission lines all told are used. All parts of the country are being similarly electrified. The system with its centre in Boston covered in 1885 an area one-eighth of a square mile. Today it covers more than 800 square miles, and its greatest expansion has been in the twentieth century. Its light and power supply thirty-five cities.

The demand in America for electricity is so great, and the increase in that demand is so constant, that one of the most stupendous opportunities confronting our people is in the water power of the continent awaiting conversion into light, heat and power.

Every stream possessing water power will finally be harnessed to industry in America, and this power, which is to be perpetual, should be held in perpetuity for the people.

The water power of America is the source of a vast ocean of energy, which no industry should be permitted to monopolize. It is as if we allowed Atlantic companies to charter the seas and levy tribute on the public for the incoming of the tides.

Federal and municipal conversion of nature's titanic water power at cost into electrical energy, to transform our industry, would introduce into our civilization a new element of progress and prosperity and vastly lessen the cost of living.

The only water wanted in American enterprise is water power, and the people should have it all.

Electricity is eternal, and its energy—from the power of the unseen—should be the common heritage of mankind.
